Peace talks get vote

United Nations (UPI) — The General Assembly voted 122-2 Thursday to resume the Geneva Middle East Peace Conference by March, with Palestinian delegates participating. The United States and Israel cast the only "no" votes.

Israel, which refuses to negotiate directly with the Palestinians, earlier withdrew its own resolution to resume the peace talks — the first time the Jewish state had ever made such a proposal at the United Nations.

Blue movie is ticket

Ann Arbor, Mich. (AP) — A cable TV outfit in financial distress is trying to get back into the black with a blue movie.

Officials at Ann Arbor Cablevision Inc. said their broadcast Friday of the French flick "Emmanuelle" will be the country's first showing of an X-rated movie on prime time TV.

The soft-core porno movie will be shown uncut and uninterrupted four different times during the evening beginning at 6:30 p.m. on the firm's new adult movie channel, they said.

Opera showing is first

New York (AP) — In a television first, a complete Metropolitan Opera performance will be broadcast live on March 15 over PBS stations. A stereo simulcast of Puccini's "La Boheme" will go to FM radio stations in major cities.

The event, announced Thursday, is being underwritten by Texaco, Inc., which has sponsored Met radio programs on Saturday afternoons for 36 years. A grant of $200,000 covers special costs of the three-hour presentation starting at 7 p.m., CST.

Parcel strike over

Washington (AP) — Striking Teamsters union members overwhelmingly approved a new contract with United Parcel Service on Thursday, ending an 84-day-old dispute that tied up Christmas merchandise deliveries in 15 Eastern states.

"The strike is over," a union spokesman announced. He said the union informed UPS that the contract had been approved and that the membership "was available to go back to work."

Election hearing slated

Columbus, Ohio (UPI) — A federal judge Thursday rejected a request for a preliminary injunction to void Ohio's Nov. 2 presidential election results and ordered Secretary of State Ted W. Brown to certify the state's 25 electors to Jimmy Carter.

U.S. District Judge Joseph Kinneary also said he would begin hearing testimony Saturday on the merits of the case. Saturday hearings are very rare for the court, said a spokesman in the clerk's office.

The suit was filed Nov. 26 by a coalition of U.S. Labor, Republican and American Party representatives.

Hearst trial delayed

Los Angeles (UPI) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst appeared briefly in Superior Court Thursday to gain a three-month delay in her trial on 11 counts of robbery, kidnap and assault stemming from her actions as a member of the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Judge William L. Ritz granted the motion postponing the scheduled Jan. 10 trial to April 4.

Soviets blasted for stinginess

Brussels, Belgium (UPI) — America and Britain slammed the Soviet Union Thursday for its tightwad attitude toward the world's poor countries.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland and other speakers at the NATO foreign ministers' conference said the Western Alliance should reject the Warsaw Pact's call for a new treaty pledging neither side will be the first to use nuclear weapons.

Kissinger defended the principle of detente but he also said the West must remain strong enough and free enough to keep the Communist world guessing about how NATO's military strength could be used.

Conference sources reported Kissinger told the closed-door session the West supplies 90% of the transfer of resources that developing countries receive.

Soviet aid to the developing world is pitifully small, Crosland said, and in any case the Communists mostly send arms. He told the foreign ministers Russia has evolved into an imperialist power in the classic manner.

Kissinger said Soviet policy is based on a mean spirit of "petit-bourgeois nationalism" aimed only at promoting the Kremlin's self-interest, the sources said.

He said the Soviets play no appreciable part in world councils such as the North-South Conference and other talks between rich and poor countries, and when they do intervene in developing nations it is only to grab opportunities to extend their influence, as in Angola.

Soviet stinginess in helping poor nations enables the Communists to devote their resources to an arms buildup of worrying proportions and promote friction around the world, Crosland said. He urged Western countries to hammer away at the theme of freedom of ideas and movement to give encouragement to the people of Eastern Europe.

Through the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, Crosland said, Western nations sent 25 times as much aid as the Soviets to the Third World in 1975. Even counting the entire Communist bloc, the proportion came to no more than 5%, the sources said.

Most of the foreign ministers rejected a proposal made by the Warsaw Pact in Bucharest last week that both military alliances sign an agreement not to be the first to use nuclear weapons.

Foreign Minister Max Van Der Stoep of The Netherlands said the proposal was "irrelevant" because all signatories of the U.N. charter already have committed themselves not to use force.

Rescue team carries Rhodd from pile of gravel where he was buried when car fell.

Car topples, pinning man

Lincoln man was injured Thursday when a railroad car he was helping unload fell from a trestle, knocking him off and burying him with gravel.

The accident happened at the Ready-mixed Concrete plant, 1800 Y. Rick Rhodd, 21, and another employee, Terry Stunden, were on the trestle unloading gravel when the weight shifted and the hopper car slid off the rails.

Rhodd, of 6100 Vine, was pinned between the fallen hopper and a pile of gravel. The full extent of his injuries was not immediately determined.

Stunden said that Rhodd was standing on a guard rail opening a door when the car tipped and fell toward him. Rhodd fell with the car, narrowly escaping being crushed.

There were between 40 and 50 tons of gravel in the hopper, Stunden estimated.

Stunden said he and another employee, Gary Hanson, started digging Rhodd out of the gravel. After they had uncovered his face and could see he was breathing, they summoned the Fire Department rescue team.

Firemen had difficulty rescuing Rhodd, because he was pinned partially under the car and against the guard rail, which had been knocked down.

District Fire Chief Curtis Kadlick said that when firemen arrived Rhodd was lying face down in the gravel. Firemen worked from all sides digging him out while ambulance personnel administered oxygen.

Kadlick said the weight of the falling car cracked railroad ties "off like toothpicks."

Rhodd was reported in critical condition Thursday evening at Lincoln General Hospital. Stunden told The Star that Rhodd apparently suffered a broken arm and internal injuries.

Stunden said that he had been standing on one side of the 6-door gravel hopper and Rhodd on the other. Stunden opened a hatch on his side, letting gravel fall to the ground, but for some reason Rhodd's hatch didn't open.

This caused a weight shift, Stunden said, which caused the hopper to tip toward Rhodd and away from Stunden.

Stunden, 29, lives at 3200 S St. He suffered no injuries.

Full extent of Rhodd's injuries not known.

Land around dam unstable

By Jim Camden

Star Staff Writer

A geologist testified Thursday that the land around the proposed Norden dam and reservoir was unstable and the dam could fail.

Dr. Wilber F. Rogers, a University of Nebraska-Omaha professor, said a preliminary survey map by the U.S. Geological Survey shows an area of general instability along the Niobrara River where the project will be built. The area is highly susceptible to landslides, Rogers said.

If the project is built as planned, water from the reservoir may seep into the bedrock and weaken the rock formation, thus aggravating geological slumping and sliding in the area, he said. Up to 15% of the rock material around the dam might fail.

Rogers also contended that landslides will take place around the reservoir, sending as much as 100,000 acre-feet of sediment into the reservoir. An irrigation canal leading from the dam to an area downstream passes through another unstable area, creating another hazard, he added.

The environmental impact statement on the project "is silent" on the area's instability, and does not provide contingency plans on how to avert loss of life and property should a problem occur, Rogers said.

"It seems difficult to me that a geologist could have visited the area and not realized the possibility of landslides," he said.

In earlier testimony, Rogers said the impact statement did not adequately discuss the problems of sediment backing up as a result of the dam or dangers to seepage from irrigation canals raising the water table.

Sediment will increase in the reservoir and below the dam in direct proportion to the decrease of the river flow, Rogers said. The build-up of sediment will raise the river bed and could increase the danger of flooding, he said.

Water may seep through the earthen canals planned for the irrigation project and raise the water table in some areas, he said.

"The danger is the water table will eventually intersect the land, and the land will not grow crops," Rogers testified. "You might be creating a monster that you may have to go back and spend money to correct the problem."

Other dam projects have suffered a seepage rate so high that 60% of the water is lost before it gets to the area to be irrigated, he said.

Neither of these problems was discussed in the impact statement, he said.

Rogers' testimony will continue Tuesday morning in the suit against the dam project by the Save the Niobrara River Association. The environmental group is seeking to halt the $160 million-plus project in the Springview-Atkinson-O'Neill area because it says the impact statement on the project is inadequate.

23,000 workmen may strike GM

Detroit (UPI) — General Motors Corp., whose 390,000 United Auto Workers-represented employees have just ratified a new contract, was faced Thursday with a 12:01 a.m. Friday strike by 23,000 workers whose walkout could curtail auto production.

Negotiations between the automaker and the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers on a new contract continued Thursday, spokesmen said. The talks began in mid-July at the same time as the GM-UAW negotiations.

A strike would close five plants — three in Ohio and one each in New York and New Jersey.

"We're optimistic that there will be a settlement," a GM spokesman said. "There would be some impact on our other production, but we're not sure how soon the impact would be felt."

The plants affected by the negotiations are the Delco Air Conditioning facility in Dayton, Ohio; Delco Products plants in Dayton, Ohio, and Rochester, N.Y.; Delco-Remy battery plant in New Brunswick, N.J., and the Packard electric facility in Warren, Ohio.

Bonds to be rebid to avoid hint of conflict

By Nancy Hicks

Star Staff Writer

The Southeast Community College board decided Thursday to rebid a $3 million bond issue to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest.

The conflict of interest issue was hashed over during an unusual meeting, held open to the public at the request of the man accused of the conflict — SCC board member G. Alan Dunlap of Milford.

After listening to all the details, board members agreed that Dunlap is a man of integrity who acted in what he felt was an ethical and moral way on the bond issue, approved by the board earlier this month to finance the new Lincoln campus site.

However, on a 5-3 vote, the board agreed to rebid the bond issue, in an effort to assure that there would be no hint of a conflict.

Rampark Open on Sun.
12 to 5:30 thru Dec. 19.—Adv.

The contract for the $3 million bond issue was originally given to First Mid America, a firm with which Dunlap has a business relationship but no financial interest.

The Union Bank, where Dunlap holds a directorship and has a financial interest, was named as trustee for the bond issue, and an Iowa firm, owned and managed by Dunlap's brother, had agreed to buy $2 million of the bond issue.

Though Dunlap participated in the discussion leading up to the vote for First Mid America, he did abstain from voting, saying he "might have a conflict of interest."

The question of possible "ethical and moral conflict of interest" was raised by Board Chairman Robert A. Wekesser of Lincoln, who refused to sign the agreement with First Mid America after he learned of Dunlap's involvement in the companies.

At issue was the definition of conflict of interest.

Dunlap, who said he personally did not feel he had done anything immoral or unethical, had been advised by his own legal counsel that to avoid a conflict of interest he merely had to refrain from voting and state that he had a possible conflict. "I honestly feel I'm not guilty," he said during an extensive self-examination of his role in the bond issue.

Other board members, including Wekesser, felt that this conflict disclosure should have come before discussions on the bid and that Dunlap should have stated the exact nature of the conflict.

Dunlap, a member of the subcommittee which reviewed the bond issue bids, said he had no conversations with

Mid America about the bond issue during the bidding process and was not involved in the negotiations that led to Union Bank being named trustee for the issue, or his brother's firm's decision to buy the $2 million in bonds.

And in an unusual move, Wekesser carefully outlined for the board and the public his financial interest in every company that has or may do business with the college.

Dunlap said he would personally pay the bill for a review of his business and school relationships and if necessary, would put his holdings in trust and resign from directorships of banks doing business with SCC until the end of his term as board member.

He also suggested that the board set up a committee to determine ethical and conflict of interest guidelines for the future. This committee will be established during the board's Dec. 21 meeting in Lincoln.

In a sometimes emotional speech, Dunlap apologized for not backing down on the issue, but said that after prayer and reflection he did not believe he was guilty.

And he promised that no matter what the board's decision, he would continue in service on the board and in friendship with the other members.

Though the board action was in effect a condemnation of Dunlap's action in not disclosing his conflict earlier, board members praised Dunlap's refusal to back down and Wekesser's strength in bringing the issue to the surface.

Even the airing in public of what could have been done in private brought praise. "This is a healthy development — that Alan (Dunlap) had the guts to bring this out . . . I think it's beautiful to do this in an open session," said Don Nielson of Lincoln.

Sprague heads investigation.

Assassination probe budget $6.5 million

Washington (AP) — The House committee investigating the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King voted on Thursday to spend $6.5 million in the first year of an estimated two year probe.

The 12-member select committee on assassinations approved the fund request without objection following a detailed presentation by chief counsel Richard A. Sprague, who described the budget as "bare bones."

Later, Sprague presented a brief outline of some areas already under investigation. These included: —Information from some sources dealing with surveillance by the FBI and security furnished Dr. King at the time of the assassination. It has been reported previously that a black police sergeant in charge of security for King's April 1968 visit to Memphis was sent home on the afternoon of the slaying.

—Obtaining names of witnesses to both assassinations. Sprague said some persons present at Parkland Hospital in Dallas who discovered a spent bullet believed to have struck Kennedy never were interviewed by law-enforcement officials.

—"Going into questions of certain photos." There have been repeated allegations that pictures of Oswald holding the rifle which killed Kennedy were altered.

—Investigating a report that, prior to the Nov. 22, 1963, slaying, U.S. intelligence agencies had information about Oswald that was not fully disclosed to other agencies or to the Warren Commission.

Sprague also announced that the Justice Department, FBI and CIA have agreed in writing not to destroy any documents until the committee has completed its investigation.

The full House must approve the budget request when Congress convenes in January.

Members of the assassination committee appeared surprised by the size of Sprague's request, which is more than three times the amount spent by the House Judiciary Committee during its impeachment probe of former President Richard M. Nixon. The request "takes your breath away," Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., chairman of the subcommittee investigating the Kennedy assassination, told Sprague.

All the members present endorsed the budget proposal without reservation. "You get what you pay for," Preyer said.

"Congress' reputation is riding on this," Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn., added. "If we're not going to be given the tools and if Mr. Sprague is not going to be given the tools, I would have to withdraw my name from the committee."

Sprague, former assistant district attorney in Philadelphia, led the government probe into the slaying of United Mine Workers insurgent Joseph Yablonski and tried the cases which resulted in eight murder convictions, including that of UMW president W.A. "Tony" Boyle.

He told the committee he could not put a time limit on the Kennedy and King investigations, but added his "best estimate" was that it would require two years.

Sprague said the second year might be less expensive since by then the areas of investigation would be narrowed.

More than half the $6.5 million was earmarked for the salaries of the 170 staff members Sprague said he hopes to recruit.

Other major expenses in the budget included: —$1.8 million for travel by staff investigators; —$425,000 for long-distance telephone and telegraph bills; —$175,000 for the purchase and rental of such equipment as lie detectors, voice analyzers and the computers needed to cross reference the hundreds of thousands of documents that already exist.

In justifying the large staff, Sprague explained that he did not intend to rely on the efforts of investigators from other government agencies such as the CIA and FBI since they would be under investigation for having withheld information at the time of the original probes into the two killings.

Sprague said the Warren Commission, which investigated the Kennedy assassination, had 83 staff members plus the services of 150 fulltime FBI agents, 60 Secret Service agents and 13 CIA officers.

The House committee was created by a 280-65 vote in September and since that time has been operating on a temporary budget of $150,000.

Reconstruction cabinet meets

Beirut, Lebanon (UPI) — Premier-designate Selim Al Hoss Thursday named a new eight-man cabinet of non-politicians and called it into immediate session to begin work on the reconstruction of Lebanon from 19 months of civil war.

Hoss, an American-educated banker, summoned the eight-member team of technocrats to a cabinet meeting only an hour after naming them to his reconstruction government to discuss "urgent social and economic questions for the rebuilding of the country."

Among the emergency measures the new cabinet discussed were:

—A proposed amendment of the by-laws of the National Development Bank to allow increased loans and aid to industries and businesses.

—The problems generated over payment of rents during the chaos of the civil war.

—Possible issuance of government bonds.

—Establishment of a special housing bank.

—Creation of a development and reconstruction council to supervise the rebuilding effort.

Although no reliable estimates are yet available to the extent of damage and the cost of reconstruction, the government officials say the rebuilding program could cost more than $5 billion.

Hoss' new government excluded all leading political and military personalities of the war and all but two of the eight men named were political unknowns.

Hoss, who studied at the University of Indiana and is a conservative Moslem, also took the ministries of trade, economy, industry and oil and information for himself in the new cabinet.

The key portfolios of foreign affairs and defense were entrusted to Fuad Butros, a 58-year-old Greek Orthodox Christian, who was one of the men named with previous political experience. He has served as a member of Parliament and in a variety of ministerial posts during the term of the late President Fuad Chehab from 1958-1964.

The post-war cabinet also included six other ministers of various religious sects, in conformity with the nation's longstanding tradition of distributing government posts on a sectarian basis.

Moslem leftists have demanded reform of this political formula, in favor of proportional representation and it was one of the causes of the war. The Moslems claimed that the system concentrated too much power in the hands of the Christians.

Besides Hoss and Butros, the line-up included Salah Salma, a Druze, as minister of interior and of housing. The portfolios of health and of resources went to Ibrahim Shaito, a Moslem Shia, while the ministries of public works, transport and tourism went to Amin Bizri, also a Sunni Moslem.

The new minister of planning is Michel Dumit, a Maronite Christian. The portfolios for the ministries of justice, finance and post, telephone and telegraph went to Farid Rafael, also a Maronite.

Greek Catholic Assad Rizk was named head of the ministries of labor and social affairs, education and agriculture.

Hoss spent the day consulting with both Christian and Moslem political leaders before naming his new government, and one Christian rightist warned that Hoss' appointment as premier was a "dangerous initiative." Politicians generally regarded the prospect of a Hoss government of technocrats as a stopgap measure until quarreling Moslem and Christian leaders can settle on a new political formula for Lebanon.

But Christian rightist leader Camille Chamoun, a former president who asked for U.S. Marine intervention in 1958, called Hoss' appointment an "extremely dangerous initiative."

Pressed to explain where the danger lay, Chamoun replied, "On all sides."

However, the rightist leader called Hoss "a man of honor" both personally and professionally.

State Department rejects South Korean ultimatum

(C) New York Times

Washington — The State Department on Thursday rejected another South Korean ultimatum, the second in two days, and publicly told the government in Seoul that its demanding statements were "not helpful."

The Korean minister of culture and information, Kim Seong Jin, issued a statement in Seoul Thursday demanding that the U.S. "clarify in public" whether American intelligence had put President Park Chung Hee's office under electronic surveillance, or bugging, as alleged in news reports.

If the U.S. refused to comply with the Korean demand, Kim said, the Korean government would investigate and take "appropriate measures," which were left unstated. If evidence of bugging was found, he said, that would "cast doubt on American morality."

The State Department's spokesman told newsmen Thursday that there would be no official comment on the reports of bugging. Other officials earlier said privately that they feared they would have to answer too many questions even if they publicly denied the press reports.

State Department spokesman John T. Ratner was asked about the strident demands from Seoul in the last two days and said, "We have conveyed to the Korean government our feeling that the statements were not helpful." While mild by ordinary standards of English, officials said that it was a sharp retort by State Department standards.

The Koreans demanded Wednesday that the U.S. release a defector from the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Sang Keun, who is cooperating with a federal inquiry into alleged Korean bribery of American congressmen. The State Department replied that Kim had chosen to stay in the U.S. of his own will.

Officials here indicated that they were puzzled over why the Koreans had suddenly chosen to get into a public fight with the U.S. when Seoul is anxious to retain an American military and economic commitment, including the presence of 42,000 American soldiers in South Korea.

"This," said one official, "is not the way to go about it." The department spokesman, however, rendered a public assurance that the U.S. security commitment to Korea remained unchanged.

Other officials here speculated that the government of President Park was afraid of what is being discovered in testimony given by the defector, Kim Sang Keun.

Dispatches from Seoul suggested that the Korean sensitivity to the bugging issue arose from allegations that such intelligence tied President Park personally to the alleged bribery and lobbying scandal.

Business favors tax cut

Washington (AP) — President-elect Carter was told Thursday the nation's business community favors a $15-billion permanent tax cut and a $5-billion jobs creation program to stimulate the economy.

Reginald Jones, chief executive of the General Electric Co., said Carter took the proposal under advisement after it was presented to him during a meeting with 15 prominent businessmen.

Although many of Carter's economic advisers also favor a tax cut of about $15 billion, most are urging a temporary tax reduction, such as a one-time tax rebate, rather than the permanent cuts favored by Jones.

Jones said he spelled out his plan to Carter and felt that most of the other businessmen in the room also supported it.

As explained by Jones, 72 per cent of the tax cut would go to persons earning less than $20,000 a year, and the remainder to persons with higher incomes.

Jones said the $15-billion tax cut would reimburse the individual taxpayer the approximate amount taken by inflation since 1972.

Irving Shapiro, board chairman of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co., said he believes the business executives were reassured by Carter's attitude and that they praised what they called the soundness of his first two Cabinet-level appointments.

"I think they're becoming more reassured every day," said Henry Ford, board chairman of the Ford Motor Co.

In an earlier meeting with his economic advisers, Carter expressed concern that the economy is in "an extremely difficult position," although he made clear he hasn't made up his mind yet what to do about it, a member of his transition staff said.

He said Carter was told by his advisers that the government could easily have a record budget deficit in fiscal year 1977 because of the ailing economy. The record deficit of $65.6 billion was set in fiscal 1976.

"One of the strongest things to come out . . . is that we're in an extremely difficult position as far as the economy is concerned, and as far as the federal budget is concerned," said the staff member, who asked not to be identified.

Jones said the tax reduction plan would cut average taxes for persons earning less than $20,000 by about 19 per cent.

Carter is told of his options

Washington (AP) — President-elect Carter was presented with options Thursday for dealing with automobile airbags, supersonic airplanes and inner-city revitalization. Several options, if adopted, would reverse controversial decisions made by the Ford administration.

In the first face-to-face encounter between Jimmy Carter and his housing and transportation staffs, Carter was briefed on issues he'll face in 1977, most specifically in the first 60 days, according to one person familiar with the session.

Details of a multibillion-dollar plan "to stimulate the housing industry" were unveiled for Carter, according to Carter spokesman Barry Jagoda. Sources said the plan involves spending up to $5 billion to subsidize interest rates on mortgages to stimulate local and national economies.

In 1975, Congress authorized $10 billion for such a program, but only $5 billion was appropriated during the Ford administration. Carter has to ask only for an appropriation bill when Congress convenes in January.

Jago Jagoda said the discussion also covered "inner-city revitalization and a wide range of transportation issues."

In the transportation field, transition staffers presented papers for Carter saying he can sustain, or reverse, decisions on the Concorde supersonic airplane and the air bag auto safety systems.

One person who did not attend the meeting, but was briefed afterwards, said only that Carter "asked questions, in detail," but made no firm decisions on the matters put before him.

A nervous crew appeared before Carter as he began a day of briefings at the presidential guest quarters, Blair House. The transition team that is advising Carter on the departments of transportation and housing and urban development had conducted two dress rehearsals for the session, according to one source.

One transition staffer said the aides went into Thursday's meeting with Carter to "lay out what he'll be facing next year, in advance and in detail."

Among the major items before Carter will be the air bag controversy. Secretary of Transportation William Coleman took a middle course this week, ordering testing of the passive restraint system, but not ordering installation on new cars.

One option would approve Coleman's directive, a second would reverse Coleman and require installation of air bags and a third would kill the air bag program completely.

Alternatives were also prepared to Coleman's decision permitting the supersonic Concorde passenger plane to land at nearby Dulles Airport several times a week for a 16-month test period.

Carter could allow increased flights or order an end to the test period and prohibit the planes from landing in the United States. The latter decision would anger the French and the British who operate the aircraft.

The transition planners also prepared to brief Carter on several urban issues, including community development programs.

The Community Development Act, a cornerstone of urban aid, expires in 1977. Carter could work to extend the current act, or to change its funding formula to target increased aid to either growing urban areas, or declining cities with high unemployment problems.

Excess drug residue found in pork

Washington (UPI) — Between 8 and 12% of all hogs slaughtered this year carried illegal sulfa drug residues into the consumer pork supply, but there was no threat to human health, the government reported Thursday.

Agriculture Department officials disclosed the findings — including one unusual case where residues were up to 100 times the legal limit — in a statement which departed from the earlier practice of omitting key figures from quarterly residue summaries.

At the same time, a Food and Drug Administration expert said the residues got into some hams and other "muscle tissue" meat, as well as the livers and kidneys where agriculture officials said virtually all the drugs appeared.

But the FDA official, Dr. Catherine

Carnevale, said although she did not know whether there was any chance the residues could affect some acutely sensitive people, "We can say to the best of our knowledge there is no threat to consumers . . . we don't believe there is any reason for a state of scare."

The residues were revealed in an Agriculture Department statement calling on hog farmers to follow federal regulations requiring withdrawal of drugs and medicated feeds from hogs at specified periods before slaughter.

Sulfa drugs are used by many hog farmers to promote faster growth and to treat some swine diseases. Regulations allow residues of up to one-tenth of one part per million in pork, and anything over that amount is illegal.

Dr. Harry C. Mussman, associate administrator of the department's animal and plant health inspection service, said in an interview that most residue violations were only fractionally over the legal limit and would be found only in pork liver and kidneys.

Residues in hams, bacon, pork chops and other cuts would be "most unlikely," he said.

Other agriculture officials said residues had been found up to 5 parts per million and Dr. Carnevale cited one rare case of nearly 10 parts per million.

Agriculture officials said they had discussed the problem earlier with hog industry groups, and Mussman said, "Now we want to elevate the visibility of the problem . . . we need a broad educational effort (among hog farmers)."

Pot pies may be lost in space deep freeze

Ames, Iowa (UPI) — To Allen Kraft, the dark, cold recesses of space a few hundred miles above earth are just a big refrigerator.

And Kraft, a professor of food technology at Iowa State University, wants to shoot a chicken or beef pot pie into space to test his theory that space could be a natural refrigerator for storing perishable foods for extended periods of time.

Kraft has outlined his project as SPAM — "Space Preservation Applied to Meat" — but it is also known informally as "Hitch Your Chuck Wagon to a Star."

To check out his supposition, the university has formally requested that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration include its test meat products, including the pot pie, on its 1979 space shuttle.

Kraft said NASA is considering the application and the agency is "very interested."

"We think there is a good chance it will be accepted," he said.

The purpose of such an experiment is to find out if storing foods in space is feasible, but also to determine if it maintains a good taste when it returns to earth, Kraft said.

The space storage idea currently is not feasible, Kraft said, but in the future when NASA is considering establishing space colonies, space dwellers could eat space-stored food instead of the dried foods consumed by earlier astronauts.

He said it might come to a time later when it would be cheaper to transport perishable items aboard the shuttles than it would be to meet the soaring energy costs of preserving the food on the planet.

In addition to the pot pie, the proposed package would also include hamburger and possibly some cured meats. The food would be vacuum packed and then sent into space via the shuttle to be exposed for a number of months. They would then be returned to earth via another rocket.

If the food passes radiation and dangerous micro-organism tests, it would then be fed to control animals.

The ultimate test, Kraft said, would be left to humans who would taste the meats and pot pie to see if they were as good as before they were stored in space.

Personalities

Trading mogul charged

Joseph P. Siegel and the firm bearing his name, Siegel Trading Co., have been charged with fraud in trading currency futures by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Siegel was accused along with nine others of making unauthorized, prearranged and non-competitive trades on the international monetary market of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Manson appeal denied

The California Supreme Court Thursday refused to reconsider the cases of Charles Manson and three women convicted of a series of murders in southern California.

Economy impact not near

Economist Walter W. Heller, former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, said Thursday he does not expect President-elect Jimmy Carter's economic policies to have a major impact until late next year.

Tearing up press card

Carl Bernstein is leaving the Washington Post next year, breaking up the Pulitzer-Prize winning "Woodstein" team that covered the Watergate scandal, the newspaper announced Thursday.

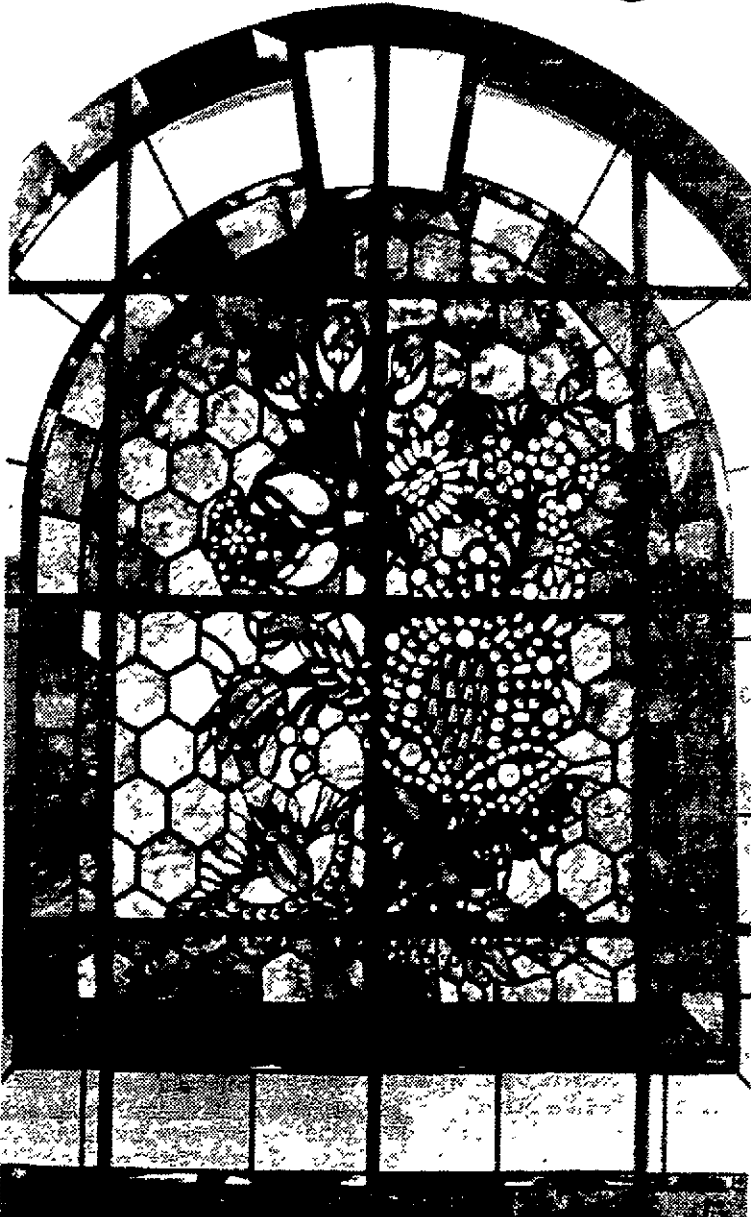

A Post reporter since 1966, Bernstein wrote the 1973 Watergate stories and two books, "All the President's Men" and "The Final Days," with Bob Woodward.

Biddle to head museum

Martin Biddle, a British archeologist, is the new director for the University of Pennsylvania Museum. Biddle, 39, will take over next Oct. 1, succeeding James P. Pritchard, who became acting director Sept. 30 on retirement of Froelich Rainey.

Public still prevails

We have all heard the old proposition that might doesn't make right but you seldom hear a public official acting on that proposition. Such, however, was the welcome explanation of Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman of his decision to forego mandatory air bags in new cars.

That decision has been a controversial one, with consumer and safety groups taking the hide off of Coleman with their criticism of his position. But that is not too alarming to us. In their zeal as self appointed protectors of the public good, some of these people and groups have come to think they know what is right for the citizens more than the citizens know themselves.

We are not assuming that the decision on air bags was a good one. While the devices have both their critics and advocates, they do seem to have a lot of merit and we are somewhat inclined to believe that the car buying public would not strenuously object to them.

This is especially true if, unlike seat belts, the air bags were no nuisance to drivers. Cost of the bags is in dispute but seems not large enough to provoke widespread resentment.

But the reason Coleman used was a commendable one. He said: "There is a very thin line between leadership . . . and coercion of the citizenry that can produce vehement opposition and lay to waste what a decision maker might proudly have characterized as his far sighted decision."

In other words, Coleman recognized the difference between stuffing something down the people's throat or gaining public acceptance of a program. The difference, as we said, is one not often honored in the processes of government.

In recent years, Washington has crammed a lot of transportation things down the public's throat, including the largely ignored 55 mile an hour speed limit and all sorts of buzzers in automobiles. We would greatly welcome an attitude in public officials that gave some respect to what the people wanted as opposed to what someone else thought was good for them.

Freedom, after all, involves the right to be wrong as well as the right to be correct. Nobody ever said we are free so long as we always make the right decision. Even if we make a mistake now and then, we still ought to have the right to decide some things for ourselves.

Whether his final decision was right or wrong, Coleman had a highly commendable reason for making it.

Arguing with history

One of the few joys of losing big is that one is not saddled with agonizing reappraisals. George McGovern, for example, probably did not suffer sleepless night after sleepless night following his crushing by the Nixon landslide. There wasn't much room for the "if onlys" in the wake of his defeat; no need to try to refigure strategy. Nothing McGovern could have done differently in his campaign could have made up those 17 million votes that separated him from Nixon.

On the other hand, President Ford is said to be dreaming those Hubert Humphrey dreams — tossing and turning between experiencing the nightmares about losing by an eyelash. In Humphrey's case the difference was a few hundred thousand votes; in Ford's something over a million, but both were close elections.

And Ford is not alone in reappraising the effort of the GOP ticket. From the right comes Ronald Reagan, who says the easiest of all things to say: "I could have won." Come on. Even Harold Stassen could say "I could have won."

This is not a surprising development, of course. The I-told-you-sos are the natural response to thwarted ambition. A Nebraska Republican interviewed by The Star prior to the Kansas City convention predicted that "if Ford wins the nomination and goes on to lose in November, the Reagan people will just turn blue. They will be convinced their man could have won."

They are convinced, too. Meetings of Reagan supporters are taking place all over the nation as that camp concentrates not only on taking over the reigns of the GOP, but on the congressional and state elections in 1978 and the next presidential election four years hence. The common thread running through the conversations and for-the-record statements of the Reagan wing is that the Republican liberals and moderates blew it. And Reagan this last weekend said he could have won the election because he would have cracked the South and would have taken the Watergate issue away from the Democrats.

He might have done both and still lost the election by a greater margin than Ford lost it. We'll not construct a scenario because hindsight scenarios are not worth the newspaper. Suffice it to say that an incumbent president endorsed by the moderates and liberals of his party almost pulled it off and given another few days (he must be thinking), he might have won it. Would Reagan have stood up so well outside the west? Would he really have cracked the South?

Well, there will be no convincing the Reagan people that he could not have won. There will be no convincing them that a hidden doctrinaire conservative majority does not exist.

They believe that the far right has tremendous appeal all across the nation — despite the demonstrated tendency of most American voters to prefer candidates closest to the middle road. If they want to argue with history, so be it.

Reader raps Phillips column

'Racist' expression

Lincoln, Neb. Kevin Phillips' column in the December 4 Lincoln Star was the most viciously racist expression of opinion I have ever seen in your newspaper's columns.

Among the symptoms of racism are: (1) the resentment of any advantage accruing to the hated group, no matter how routine or justified, (2) the invoking of any possible source of resentment of one race against the other, no matter how ancient and out of date, and (3) the assumption of cultural superiority of one's own group in comparison with the hated group.

Phillips' comments in his column concerning American Indians manifest all three symptoms.

(1) He claims that Indians are receiving payments of various kinds that are "illogical and excessive." He has in mind mainly court-awarded reparations for unjustly taken lands and the money paid for rights of mineral extraction from Indian lands.

Surely Indians as well as whites should be able to go to court if they think they have been unjustly treated: or does Phillips want to make a racial distinction in this regard?

The American arrangement of private ownership of land in most cases implies that owners fortunate enough to discover coal or gold or oil on their land can profit personally from their extraction. Does he think that ownership of land should be a privilege reserved to whites? So it seems, for he complains only about payments to Native Americans for extraction rights, and not about similar payments to whites.

Today's Mail

He even attempts to exaggerate the benefit Indians will receive. He quotes the Wall Street Journal as estimating that the Cheyennes would receive "over 25 years more than $100,000 for every Indian on the reservation" in exchange for coal located there. That figures out to $4,000 per year, hardly enough to grow rich on.

(2) It is hard to believe, but Phillips actually waves the bloody shirt of the 19th century Indian wars. He speaks with great sympathy of "the descendants of the forgotten troopers in dirty-shirt blue who died at Little Big Horn and a hundred other places . . ." who, he thinks, are more deserving recipients of funds than the Indians.

(3) Finally Phillips says the Indians were "people so primitive they couldn't invent the wheel." He further claims that the Indians left the land "underdeveloped" and that the white soldier martyrs of the Indian wars died " . . . so that the United States could grow to its present immensity and wealth," as though the excellence of a culture is to be measured by the Gross National Product and by square miles of conquest.

Comparison of cultures in a general way to determine which is "better" or "higher" is a fruitless task, and such a comparison is transparently self-serving when on the basis of two or three points of comparison, Phillips concludes that his own culture is clearly the superior one. One wonders if the original M. Chauvin was as pathetic in the assertions of his own superiority as is Kevin Phillips.

Military pensions

Lincoln, Neb.

Your lead story today on the 35th anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack, entitled Military Pension Plan "Lavish," withholds the true facts about military retirement. Had U.S. Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., made such a statement 35 years ago today, he would probably have been impeached. We were needed then.

I retired in 1959 at the highest enlisted grade eligible for retirement. My retirement pay amounts to the grand sum of approximately $4,200 even with the inflation clause, after serving 20 years in the U.S. Navy that included 11 years of overseas duty away from home and family. Five of those years were served in the South Pacific and included being at Pearl Harbor during the attack. The career military were the ones called upon to lead the way during Korea. Does Congressman Aspin plan on doing away with the military and give Russia a free hand at world conquest?

If military retirement was such a good deal, more people would get on the bandwagon and take advantage of it. Looking back, it wasn't worth it for me since President Eisenhower changed the plan six months before I retired and that decreased the amount I would have drawn by about 50 percent.

Incidentally, according to news accounts, Rosemary Wood receives $15,000 after serving ex-President Nixon about 6 1/2 years as secretary. Anyone who served in World War II, Korea, other actions is certainly entitled to a better break than she.

CLIFFORD F. GRIFFIN

Washington — A new law that becomes fully effective on Jan. 1, 1978, will require agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to retire by age 55. It means that 650 men will have to leave the bureau during the next year — nearly one agent out of 12, among them some in senior positions.

Those prospective retirements are among a number of factors that could make the next year a decisive time for the country's most important law-enforcement agency. There is a good chance that the FBI will get a new director, too, although Clarence Kelley has said that he does not intend to leave. And the bureau's relationship to its parent Department of Justice is still being redefined.

All of this poses a great responsibility for Jimmy Carter and the man or woman he chooses to be attorney general — and a great opportunity. The FBI not only has important functions in dealing with the enormous American crime problem, it also has a good deal to do with setting the tone of civil liberties and official respect for law in this country.

One of Carter's transition teams has been studying the Justice Department. It is due to give Carter a briefing book listing problems that may require early consideration by the next attorney general, and some possible policy options. The FBI is doubtless one of the topics.

Washington — Former Vice President Spiro Agnew, convicted of income tax evasion in 1973, has sought a presidential pardon from the man who succeeded him, Gerald Ford.

White House attorneys, perhaps recalling the uproar over their boss's pardon of Richard Nixon, politely but firmly referred Agnew's lawyer to the Justice Department.

Agnew's bid for a pardon came shortly after October 10, when his sentence of three years probation expired. An Agnew attorney called White House counsel Philip Buchen's office.

The conversation "was very low key, very professional," a White House official confided. The brief discussion, we have learned, centered on the "receptivity" of the White House to a formal filing for a pardon by Agnew.

"The reply was that there have been procedures established by Justice," the White House official told us. "The

Anthony Lewis

Public debate about the FBI has focused on the dramatic disclosures of illegal action in recent years — such things as its repeated break-ins at the offices of the Socialist Workers Party. Those episodes do raise extremely important issues, and they have had a large impact on feelings inside the bureau, but some informed persons think a less-discussed problem is just as weighty. That is the quality of the FBI's investigative work.

During his decades as director, J. Edgar Hoover put heavy emphasis on simple crimes with measurable results — notably auto theft — and on alleged internal security threats. His presentations to Congress emphasized the value of property recovered by the bureau, the number of stolen cars and the like. He was extremely reluctant to investigate organized crime or civil rights violations and moved only under pressure from Attorney General Robert Kennedy.

More recently, the FBI has begun to shift its targets and its methods. Outside experts say that the quality of its investigations is improving — but that much more needs to be done to meet the sophisticated challenge of serious national crime.

The other crucial problem is that of accountability.

In the Hoover years, the FBI came virtually to ignore the Justice Department. President Ford's attorney general, Edward H. Levi, has said that the very day he arrived at his office, an FBI man asked him to sign wire tapping orders that neither he nor anyone else in the department had studied. He refused.

Levy has done much to regulate the work of the bureau, working out some written guidelines and limiting its security operations. FBI officials are more concerned about the department now — but relations are still quite distant and dim. Present department officers agree that much remains to be done to assure accountability.

The most significant single step the next administration could take to improve FBI methods and accountability would probably be to appoint a really strong-minded and respected new director. That is said with due respect for Kelley's transitional role, but he has not been a strong leader.

The new man should come from outside the bureau, and probably from outside the immediate world of police work; he should be a lawyer so hard-headed and at the same time so committed to legal rights that he would have the respect of both old-time FBI people and outsiders.

Apart from the FBI, many interesting issues in the law await Carter. He promised during the campaign, for example, to pick both federal prosecutors and judges on merit, choosing from persons recommended by "independent, blue-ribbon judicial selection commissions." He did exactly that as governor of Georgia, but it will not be so easy in Washington.

Traditionally, senators have an influential or even a decisive voice on federal judges and U.S. attorneys in their states. Can Carter persuade them to make their recommendations from a list drafted by some new commission?

Will senators help choose the commission? Will Democratic and Republican senators be expected to work together?

Those are just a few of the hard questions that will have to be answered before the promised change is made on appointing methods. And there are many other large issues ahead in the legal area: drug law enforcement, the confused and often contradictory anti-trust policy, the position on so-called reverse discrimination.

Law is less glamorous as a subject for speculation than what Carter will do, and whom he will appoint, in foreign affairs. But the decisions and appointments that will determine the federal government's legal directions over the next four years could matter as much to the quality of Americans' lives.

request was no more than any good lawyer would do for his client."

Agnew resigned in disgrace on Oct. 10, 1973 when he pleaded no contest to a single count of tax evasion. The plea, equivalent to a conviction, helped Agnew avoid a messy public trial.

At the time, the Justice Department filed a detailed statement which showed that Agnew began accepting payoffs in 1967 when he was governor of Maryland. The payments continued right up to January, 1973, when a federal grand jury began investigating Agnew.

Footnote: We can find no evidence that Agnew took his plea for a pardon to the Justice Department. His lawyer, Judah Best, declined comment.

Cautioning Carter — In finding a labor secretary, Jimmy Carter is caught between the two groups who punched through his election, the blacks and Big Labor.

The Congressional Black Caucus, in a strongly worded private letter to Carter, urged him not to appoint former Ford administration Labor Secretary John Dunlop as his own top man at Labor.

But Big Labor cherishes Dunlop for resigning after President Ford wretched on a promise to support a pro-labor bill. Labor leaders, therefore, are strongly backing Dunlop for the job.

"The caucus asserted that Dunlop 'demonstrated insensitivity' to minority groups by making 'no effort' to upgrade the Labor Department's Office of Federal Contract Compliance. The office is supposed to enforce civil rights laws with federal contractors. To select Dunlop for the Labor Department job, charged the black legislators, would "be a signal that the new administration is not to begin afresh with a new direction."

Meanwhile, in a recent court deposition, Mary Lepper, the former director of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's higher education division, has also blasted Dunlop.

She swore that Dunlop, as a Dean at Harvard in 1970-73 "opposed . . . setting goals and time tables" for attracting more women and minority employees to the Ivy League school.

Dunlop, now back at Harvard, twice refused to discuss his record with us. "I'm a private citizen . . . not a candidate for office," he said. "Write any damn thing you please."

Footnote: In fairness to Dunlop, he generally received high marks as Secretary of Labor.

GOP infighting rages

Marianne Means

Washington — Normally, the chairmanship of either major party is not considered your really classy political post.

It is, traditionally held by low-profile technicians who are willing to spend long hours on the road and on the phone soothing egos and raising money and doing other backroom chores. It is not widely regarded as a natural stepping-stone to greater things.

But suddenly the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee has become the most desired object since diamonds went out of fashion as a girl's best friend.

The list of volunteers eager to take on this unglamorous post is staggering. It includes the usual quota of little-known but ambitious state chairmen. But it also stars such dignified personages as Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, Secretary of Treasury William Simon, and former Secretary of Treasury John Connally.

The reason is quite simple; it is the only post with national visibility currently available to Republican politicians interested in staying in public life. Both Rumsfeld and Connally have dreams of the presidency in 1980; Simon is interested in the Senate or governorship in New Jersey.

The Republicans will pick a new chairman to replace Mary Louise Smith, who resigned, when the national committee meets here Jan. 14.

There is a lot of brave talk about forming a consensus to avoid splitting the party into moderate and right-wing ideological camps, but in view of the proliferation of candidates a bitter fight seems inevitable.

President Ford could prove to be the key to the selection of a moderate. He originally begged Smith to stay because he feared an attempted takeover of the party by Ronald Reagan's forces. The only way to avert their coup may be if Ford openly steps in now with his own candidate.

But he faces something of a delicate dilemma. Ford reportedly promised his campaign manager, James Baker, the RNC chairmanship or Secretary of Commerce (if he won) when he persuaded Baker to leave the Commerce undersecretaryship to join the campaign. But Rumsfeld and Simon also need Ford's support if either of them is to succeed, since they have no political base of their own.

Ford has leaned heavily on Rumsfeld's advice ever since he came to the White House. Their friendship was launched 10 years ago when then-Congressman Rumsfeld led the successful fight to make Ford minority leader. Ford sent Rumsfeld to the Pentagon despite skimpy qualifications, and he might be willing to boost his buddy once again.

But Rumsfeld — and for that matter, Simon, too — has not paid his dues by working the partisan vineyard, usually a prerequisite for the chairmanship. Connally and Baker, by contrast, have. Connally, who is very conservative, is trying to eat into potential Reagan support. Reagan, however, doesn't want to be upstaged by the party's only other well-known conservative, just in case he should want to run for president himself in 1980.

Baker, who managed George Bush's unsuccessful Senate race in 1970, hails from Texas as does Connally but is considerably less conservative. He and Connally are not chums.

So the in-fighting rages, with far more at stake than two years in charge of a defeated and divided party. If a Reagan agent or Connally triumphs, the party will remain narrow-based and conservative, which was its great handicap in the presidential election. If a moderate wins, it may have a chance of shaking what Sen. Robert Dole called its "elitist and exclusionary" image.

But that chance also depends on whether the chairman spends his time building a party or building his own presidential candidacy.

It's a pretty pickle.

Suicide or rebirth?

Ralph De Toledano

Washington — The Republican National Committee must choose a new chairperson — man or woman — to replace Mary Louise Smith, and the process will be a difficult one. Both the committee and the Republican Party are divided on two issues:

1. Should the new chairman represent a neutral position between the liberal and conservative wings — or should his view reflect those of the predominantly conservative party majority?

2. Should the new chairman be a spokesman for the party or a political technician, like the Democrat's Robert Strauss, who will work quietly to strengthen the party and prepare it for the 1978 and 1980 elections?

Mrs. Smith neither spoke out vigorously for the Republican Party nor did she contribute anything organizationally. And she enraged many Republicans by improperly using her office to insure the nomination of President Ford.

An argument can be made for either side on either issue. Unfortunately, the wrangling will be dominated by some faulty propositions — namely that the Republican Party is in extremis. The party's death knell is being rung by Eric Sevareid and others who pontificate for the national media, and many Republicans are taking them seriously.

It is true that the GOP is not seeing its best days. But on balance, no case can be made that it is ready for the mortician. The presidential election was lost, but by a hair — and there is reason to believe that massive vote fraud in four states changed the outcome.

What the unsolicited obituaries ignore is that Republican losses in statehouses and the Congress were minimal, whereas given the loss of the presidency they should have been considerable if traditional patterns had obtained.

The Republicans lost the South on the presidential line and did not do well in subsidiary elections there. But this was due not to a failure of the "Southern strategy" but to the fact that the Democratic candidate was a Southerner.

Regional loyalties supervened and the question remains whether this is a temporary or permanent condition.

At the same time, the Republicans reestablished themselves in states where a dangerous erosion of their strength had been taking place. In 1980, Jimmy Carter will probably carry most of the South though it is doubtful that he will be able to hold Texas, a fulcrum of Southern political power. And if Ronald Reagan or John Connally becomes Republican national chairman, the GOP may make great inroads into Democratic strength below the Mason-Dixon line.

Both men will be organizationally strong, and they will also appeal to the prevalent conservatism of the electorate.

Reagan, particularly, showed his strength among conservative Democrats and independents during the primaries, and he can bring a little sheen to the usually dull image of the GOP.

The main point, however, is that the American political system cannot remain viable in a one-party context.

For many decades, the Democratic Party was merely a token opposition to the triumphant Republicans. We are passing through an era in which the places have been reversed. What is important is that an opposition exists.

It will take courage and imagination to restore the Republican Party to its former role in the American political scheme of things. But simply because politics, like nature, abhors a vacuum, the GOP will continue to exist unless its leaders opt for suicide by remaking their image in a pale imitation of the Democratic Party.

However flawed, the Grand Old Party has stood for political and economic traditions which thrive in the American soil. Its job is not to jettison those traditions but to restate them in terms which all Americans can understand and appreciate.

Cutley News Service

Toymakers cater to new clientele

(c) New York Times

Giengen, West Germany — The venerable German toymaking industry, which survived two world wars, a depression and a recession, is now threatened by a critical shortage of children.

The pill did it, and the changing, more hedonistic way of life of millions of young West German couples. The birth rate has fallen sharply and so have toy sales.

So the manufacturers — those who can — are trying to invent toys, that adults can enjoy. Those who can't, like the Margarete Steiff Co., which makes stuffed animals here in the Swabian hills, are exporting more of their wares to the United States.

All the manufacturers share worry about the future. As Peter Wiedling, owner of a toy store in Munich, put it, "Not enough babies today means not enough adults tomorrow — who will be our customers then?"

Christmas sales account for half the year's volume — about $1 billion annually in sales for the West German retail toy trade. This season has been "catastrophic" so far, a toy dealer in Ulm said, and unless things pick up as Christmas draws nearer, 1976 will be "depressing."

The increasing prevalence of birth control, the fact that many women have jobs and the preference of many young people for enjoying life for a while instead of having children is changing West German life, and even its economic patterns.

The postwar population explosion was finished here by 1972 and now more and more couples are deciding to have no children or, at the most, two.

"By 1985," warned an official of the Marklin Electric Train Co. recently, "the traditional intended customers of the toy industry — children — will diminish by 3.6 million. This will lead to a drop of almost 40% in potential demand."

What to do? In 1972 Marklin started making sets of tiny trains, too small for children, hoping to catch their parents' interest.

Wiedling's toy store, on Munich's main shopping street, the Theatinerstrasse, displays these tiny trains in a roundhouse placed much too high for any child to reach, or even see.

The minuscule engines roll on tracks only 17-64 of an inch wide, too delicate for a child to handle. Although there is at least one 17-month-old girl in Bonn who gets her father out of bed in the morning to play with "his" train, Marklin had men 25 to 50 years old in mind when it designed these smaller models.

The strategy worked. The company is still the leading West German toy manufacturer. But others have lost their share of the shrinking market to such foreign firms as Milton Bradley, and Parker Brothers, whose parlor games aimed at the adult market have swept West Germany. Backgammon in countless variations, Monopoly and new games about such exotica as newspaper reporters have replaced dolls and stuffed toys as the biggest sellers in Wiedling's store.

Giengen's Margarete Steiff Co. changed from a one-person shop to an industry at the turn of the century, when the stuffed bears made by the polio-stricken founder caught on in a big way in the United States. Miss Steiff's "bear factory" expanded and came to dominate this sleepy village on the Brenz River, and Steiff has since become a synonym for stuffed animals that demand to be cuddled.

"We're aiming at the 4- to 8-year-old child," said Manfred Haag, the company's sales manager, in an interview. There are 2.6 million children of that age in West Germany today, but in 1985 there will be only 1.6 million, according to census projections, so the Steiff company is turning to exports for salvation — $2.1 million worth this year, about half to the United States.

The animals are handmade. Nine hundred employees, most of them women (like Marklin's train women a few miles away in Goppingen) cut, stitch, stuff and paint 14,000 animals a day. They are paid about $4.65 an hour in wages and fringe benefits, so the little toys are expensive.

In West Germany a small baby seal retails for $12.50 and a medium size Teddy gets the equivalent of $39.

"The devaluation of the dollar caused us some terrible problems," Haag said. "We had to make a choice between losing our share of the U.S. market or narrowing our profit margin. We chose the latter, and the market didn't collapse."

Chicago's golden arches go uptown

Schaumburg, Ill. (AP) — Small golden arches stand out on wood paneling at the entrance. Inside are a galaxy of color combinations on walls, seats and tables, glass partitioned sections, four sparkling chandeliers, and pictures of knights and coats of arms.

It's one of two fancy-style McDonald's restaurants in the Chicago area, an English inn that draws 4,000 customers daily. The other is in the ritzy Water Tower Place on Michigan Avenue — lots of wood paneling and some subdued lighting.

If these new fast-food outlets are the first in a trend, it could be because of the diners' taste for the aesthetic rather than for the hamburgers.

Advertising Age, the trade publication, said in a recent article about Burger King, No. 2 in the quick hamburger trade, that market research on fast-food companies showed "a significant number of consumers disenchanted with the assembly line nature of the business, the lack of variety in the menu and the loss of individual service."

There might be an economic incentive, too. A new Agriculture Department analysis showed the fast-food industry, "generally ... considered to be recession-proof," starting something of a slowdown two years ago.

Until 1970, the analysis said, sales in fast-foods grew at about 20% a year. In 1975 and 1976, growth in the business slowed to about 10%, the analysis showed.

McDonald's is, and has been, tops in the field. The firm's sales in 1975 topped $2.25 billion, up 26% from a year earlier, Advertising Age said. That was nearly 20% of the $11.6 billion fast-food market, up from 17.2% in 1974.

Kentucky Fried Chicken, next largest in the total fast-food market, has less than 10% of the market, the trade magazine said.

The Commerce Department said fast foods accounted for 26.6% of total sales in the eating-out market in 1975, down slightly from the 27.3% in 1974.

All change in the industry isn't in decor. McDonald's and Burger King are trying fried chicken in some areas, and Kentucky Fried Chicken has been selling beef ribs for a couple of years. McDonald's won't say whether the English inn or the Water Tower outlet have helped business. They apparently haven't hurt it.

"Business is fantastic," said the Water Tower McDonald's management. "We can seat 140 and we are in the process of enlarging."

WYETH AT KUERNERS
By Betsy James Wyeth

This collector's edition takes up where The Work of Andrew Wyeth left off. It is a book about the artist by his wife that contains 370 reproductions — 315 of which have never been reproduced before, and reveals a startlingly intimate view of Wyeth at work. In presenting the material, she lets us see not only how the artist works but allows us to share with him his deepest feelings.

Sequence after sequence of drawings grows dynamically toward the final painting and one gets a subtle understanding of why Andrew Wyeth's work is so charged with those unseen presences that create the compelling depths and tensions in his work.

This is a book about art that inevitably becomes a book about life.

Now until Christmas save 20% ... $60.00 ... $48.00
The printing plates have been destroyed so this will become a collector's edition.

Iran hopes to rival Western industrial powers

Tehran, Iran (AP) — Iran is rapidly developing into an industrial power to rival the nations of Western Europe, the minister of economics finance said Thursday.

Hushan Ansary told The Associated Press in an interview that within 12 years Iran's industrial production will equal that of a developed Western European nation. He said Iran also intends to continue selective investment in foreign enterprises such as its recent major investment in Krupp.

Behind Iran's industrialization drive is Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's policy of conserving Iranian oil and using it for selective purposes such as petrochemicals whenever possible.

The Shah told The AP in an interview earlier that the West should push ahead in research for energy substitutes such as fusion, geothermal, hydrogen and solar power. He also said the 15 per cent price increase for oil that Iran has suggested would be moderate and would add only a fraction to U.S. inflation.

Ansary said, "By 1988, we expect annually to be producing one million cars, 3.2 million refrigerators, three million television sets, 60 million pairs of shoes, 15 million tons of steel, half a million tons of aluminum and 1.2 billion yards of textiles."

"We are going through a stage in our economic development which makes investment abroad in selective measures necessary," Ansary said. "There will be development of a capital market with inflow and outflow at the same time. Also, this is a part of our recycling (of oil income) effort."

A major part of the money would go into goods and services, he said, "some in investment and, depending on resources available and our own needs, some in assistance to other nations."

Last month Iran acquired a 25 per cent interest in Krupp, the West German industrial titan.

"The possibility of Volkswagen cooperating with our auto industry has been discussed off and on," he added. "They have shown interest in such cooperation but there is nothing conclusive yet."

But the minister said there was nothing to recent reports of Iranian interest in Montedison, the big state-owned Italian chemical organization.

Ansary, who made a private fortune in Japan as a businessman, serves without salary as minister of economic affairs and finance. He is a former Iranian ambassador to the United States.

He said Iran's gross national product — GNP — will exceed $60 billion when the current fiscal year ends in March 1977. By comparison, the U.S. GNP in 1975 was over $1.5 trillion.

The Iranian growth in real terms is an increase of 14 per cent for the year compared to an advance of only 2.7 per cent last year, when an 11 per cent decline in the oil sector undercut a 16 per cent growth in the nonoil sector.

Ansary said Iran expects another 14 per cent real growth in GNP in 1977-78, including a 5 per cent gain in oil, 7 per cent in agriculture, 19 per cent in industry and mines and 21 per cent in services.

He said by the end of next year Iran expects to be the world's sixth ranking copper producer with production of between 125,000 and 150,000 tons of blister copper, a basic metallic copper product that is 98.5 to 99.5 per cent pure.

Major copper deposits already have been discovered, he said, and Iran is prospecting for uranium.

Iran will start exporting blister copper next year, Ansary said, and at the same time will begin construction of a huge copper refinery which will be able to handle all copper production.

Once the refinery is completed, Ansary expects Iran to use its full production internally for a long period. He said the Anaconda Corp. of the United States is working with Iran on the project.

Odd-ball ventures collected

Washington (UPI) — The federal agency responsible for insuring 14,000 of the nation's banks has acquired financial interest in some unusual assets lately — fleets of tuna boats and taxis, an X-rated movie, a "bawdy house" and a valuable copy of the Moslem Bible.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation also purchased 47 wind machines at a cost of $427,000 to protect its citrus crops from freezing, and some beehives to pollinate its almond trees.

The reason for these "odd-ball" ventures was explained Thursday by Robert E. Barnett, chairman of the FDIC, in a speech in San Juan, Puerto Rico. The text was released in Washington.

Barnett said when a bank fails the FDIC must either pay off the insured depositors or arrange for another bank to assume the liabilities and purchase some of the assets.

Before 1973 the FDIC asset inventory was relatively small, Barnett said. But since then, eight large banks have failed, including the U.S. National Bank of San Diego and New York's Franklin National Bank.

Currently, he said, the FDIC administers an inventory of 78,000 assets with an aggregate book value of $2.6 billion.

Under law, said Barnett, the FDIC must dispose of the assets acquired from failed banks "in an orderly manner, rather than on a forced sale basis," meaning the government must manage the assets until the best buyer can be found.

"We have operated a sizable navy with a fleet consisting of tuna boats, shrimp boats and oil tankers," he said.

"Running a navy is a complicated business. We have even had difficulty keeping our boats afloat. We had an oil tanker run aground off Havana, and we had a shrimp boat blown into the main street of Aransas Pass, Tex., by Hurricane Celia."

Among other assets, Barnett listed:

— Acquisition of a loan to a distributor of movies, one of whose properties is a major X-rated film. "Our prospects for ultimate collection of that loan depend on good attendance at that film."

— A loan to a person "whose main source of income to repay our loan was rental paid for the use of a property as a bawdy house."

— Interest in taxi fleets in California, Arizona and New York.

— Abandoned or developing farm properties such as citrus orchards and vineyards.

— Abandoned churches and synagogues, and a copy of the Koran "valued in seven figures."

"While these may appear to be unusual assets to be acquired as a result of bank failures, it is important to realize that we never get to liquidate the assets of a normal bank," Barnett said. "We are always liquidating the assets of failed banks, and banks that fail tend to be unusual and into some odd-ball financial ventures."

Alleged lack of tact costs Santa his job

Carlsbad, Calif. (AP) — The season to be merry started early and ended early for Alex Rodriguez.

In a bright red Santa Claus suit, he stepped out of a helicopter at a shopping center the day after Thanksgiving.

The 25-year-old Rodriguez was well received at 230 pounds and 5 feet 9. But then a woman complained he called her little girl fat.

The agency that hired Rodriguez fired him, and he is threatening now to sue for back pay.

Quake prediction brought to close

San Francisco (AP) — The scientist who predicted last April that a strong quake could hit Los Angeles within a year called off the prediction Thursday.

New shock wave information since April doesn't fit the prediction theory, said Dr. James Whitcomb of the California Institute of Technology.

"I think the test should be considered over with, with a negative result," Whitcomb told the American Geophysical Union.

Despite his insistence that his experiment was just that, and not a real prediction, Whitcomb's announcement last April caused a wave of consternation. One Los Angeles city official threatened to sue him because of the statement's alleged bad effect on property values.

According to the theory, known as dilatancy, some earthquakes are foreshadowed by changes in the speed of shock waves that travel through the ground from blasting and from other earthquakes.

In late 1974, Whitcomb observed a slowing down, then a return to normal of shock waves in a broad area north of Los Angeles. Based on that evidence, Whitcomb said a quake registering 5.5 to 6.5 on the Richter scale would be likely to strike within a year.

Whitcomb told the earth scientists group Thursday that after a 4.7 quake in the Newhall area last April 8, the waves slowed down again. The dilatancy theory cannot explain the decrease in wave speed, he said.

One interpretation, he agreed, is that the Newhall quake was the one he had expected — but if so, its magnitude was substantially below the predicted level.

Whitcomb told reporters Thursday he did not consider the theory disproved.

"I'm just testing a hypothesis," he said. "We have to do many tests before we can establish the validity of the theory and this was only one."

Earlier, a scientist said that, although its meaning is still a mystery, the uplifted Palmdale Bulge near Los Angeles is likelier than any other area to be jolted by earthquakes.

Bronfman kidnap said bilking scheme

White Plains, N.Y. (UPI) — Jurors asked Thursday to rehear a defendant's claim that the alleged kidnapping of Seagram liquor heir Samuel Bronfman II took place not at gunpoint, but in a moonlight discussion over blackberry brandy.

In their third day of deliberation, the seven-woman, five-man panel heard a court reporter read Mel Patrick Lynch's testimony that during his conversation with Bronfman, "I tried to talk him out of it for over an hour."

Lynch, being tried with his Brooklyn neighbor, Dominic Byrne, contends that Bronfman, 23, engineered his own abduction from his mother's estate in Purchase, N.Y., in order to bilk a $2.3 million ransom from his father, Seagram Co. Ltd. chairman Edgar Bronfman.

The ransom, paid in cash, was recovered shortly after the young heir was found, bound and blindfolded in Lynch's apartment. Police and FBI agents were led there by Byrne after Bronfman had been missing for nine days.

The Irish-born defendants face a minimum 15-year term if convicted on the kidnapping charges. The maximum sentence is 25 years to life in prison.

Lynch, a 38-year-old fireman, told the jury he was blackmailed by Bronfman, who allegedly threatened to expose him to the fire department as a homosexual. Lynch also said he and Bronfman were lovers.

Bronfman denied ever knowing Lynch before the Aug. 8, 1975, incident. He said a man in a ski mask ran up to him about midnight as he was leaving the garage, poked a gun in his ribs, handcuffed and blindfolded him, then led him to a car, allegedly driven by Byrne.

Lynch's version differed. He said he met Bronfman outside the house. "We talked (about) my reluctance to go along with it... and we were drinking blackberry brandy."

Justice George Beisheim has ruled out a defense of duress for Lynch. He told the jury that blackmail "is not the use or threatened use of physical force," adding, "the key word is physical."

Byrne has also claimed duress and the judge told the panel they may consider his arguments because of "contradictory" testimony.

The panel has also heard a copy of the anguished ransom pleas Bronfman said he was forced to tape record on cassettes that were mailed to his father.

On the first of three messages, Bronfman urges his father to follow ransom instructions in a voice that often cracked in apparent emotional strain. But toward the end, he is heard to say, in a quick conversational tone, "Hold it, do it again."

Caviar price up

Tehran, Iran (AP) — The price of Iranian caviar has taken a hefty jump.

A U.S.-based firm, Pana Caviar, agreed to pay $16,384,000 for 275 tons of caviar to be delivered over the next five years. That's a 51% increase over the previous auction, when a bid of $10,830,000 won the contract for a similar amount.

Omaha surgeon backs decision

By Lynn Zerachling
Star Staff Writer

An Omaha surgeon backed up a Lincoln doctor's decision not to perform corrective surgery on Niles Towle on the grounds the surgery would have been "cataclysmic."

Dr. Sam Swenson testified that such surgery could have resulted in Towle's death. The operation to treat an abdominal infection could have spread that infection, he asserted, instead of containing it.

Dr. Swenson appeared during the eighth day of the trial brought by Towle's widow, Norma Jean, who contends Dr. Gillespie and St. Elizabeth Community Health Center were negligent in treating her husband. Towle died five days after he had intestinal bypass surgery.

Dr. Swenson, the defense's first "expert" witness in addition to Dr. Gillespie, refuted testimony from another "expert," Dr. J. G. Allen, professor of surgery at Stanford Medical School. Dr. Allen testified earlier this week.

Dr. Swenson, who has performed almost 300 intestinal bypass operations similar to Towle's, said he wouldn't have performed the corrective surgery on Towle the day before he died. Dr. Allen said Dr. Gillespie was remiss in not operating and in not looking at an X-ray taken on Sunday, June 16, 1974. Towle died early the next morning.

Dr. Swenson said Dr. Gillespie could not have determined from that X-ray that Towle had an abdominal infection.

Dr. Allen, Mrs. Towle's witness, claimed that the X-ray would have indicated peritonitis because some "free air" showed up on that X-ray. That air indicated the infection, he said.

The only sign that indicated Towle might have peritonitis, Dr. Swenson countered, was Towle's 103-degree temperature. However, Dr. Swenson agreed with Dr. Gillespie, who also took the stand in his own defense again Thursday, that Towle's body successfully was fighting off the peritonitis.

In many cases, Dr. Gillespie explained to the 12 jurors, "the body simply walls off, secludes and surrounds the infection."

The infection was caused by a leakage of fecal material through an abdominal suture. Dr. Allen told the jury Towle would have lived had Dr. Gillespie operated to close that leak.

Dr. Gillespie ordered that X-ray on Sunday, but did not see the film until after Towle had died on Monday, June 17, 1974.

Dr. Swenson also agreed with Dr. Gillespie that Towle didn't die from peritonitis, as charged by Dr. Allen.

Just exactly what Towle did die from seems to become more cloudy as testimony continues in Lancaster District Court.

First, Dr. Gillespie said Towle died from the collapse of tiny air sacks in the lungs.

Then, Dr. Allen said Towle died from peritonitis which caused the lung problems.

Wednesday, Lincoln pathologist Dr. John Porterfield said his autopsy revealed both peritonitis and the collapse of the lungs, but admitted there were other factors which could be involved.

Thursday, Dr. Swenson said he still thinks Towle died from a blood clot in his lungs. However, he said the blood clot didn't show up in the autopsy report because Towle's body was embalmed before the autopsy was performed.

Another issue emerging in the case seems to center on the quality of health care performed in Lincoln.

Attorneys for Mrs. Towle and Dr. Allen are contending that the standard of medical care practiced in Lincoln doesn't meet the national standard. However, in discussing that issue Dr. Swenson said that standards vary from California to Nebraska.

"The practice of medicine is still very definitely an individualized practice," he explained.

"We have been trained to a certain standard, of course, but we must adapt ourselves to the individual in each case," Dr. Swenson said.

Defense attorneys said they hope to close their case Friday. Then, the case will be submitted the seven men and five women jurors.

Oil firms said stockpiling

Washington (AP) — U.S. imports of oil hit a record high early this month, and some observers say it's because oil companies are building up their stockpiles in anticipation of a new price hike by the cartel of oil-producing nations.

The American Petroleum Institute said imports of crude oil increased by some 927,000 barrels a day to an average of more than 6.6 million daily during the week ending Dec. 3, the latest reporting period.

At the same time, said API, imports of refined products increased by 474,000 barrels a day, to about 2.5 million barrels daily.

The total petroleum imports of 9.1 million barrels a day far surpasses the previous record of 8.2 million last March.

Even before the new figures came out late Wednesday, Mohammad Sadli, president of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), told reporters that oil companies were buying heavily to build up crude oil stockpiles before OPEC meets Dec. 15 to consider a price increase.

James Flug, director of the Energy Action Committee, a citizens' consumer group, said Thursday the companies stand to reap large profits on stockpiled oil and thus have no interest in opposing an increase.

Flug, appearing in a brief televised discussion with Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb, asserted that President Ford's administration has made little effort to discourage OPEC from raising oil prices this month.

But Zarb said the administration has been telling OPEC members that "an increase of even a penny a barrel is not consistent with the facts and cannot be justified."

The API statistics showed that stocks of crude oil have risen some 20.6 million barrels above the level of a year ago.

Meanwhile, the National Petroleum Council issued a report on the prospects for advanced techniques of squeezing more oil out of existing domestic oil fields.

The council, a joint industry-government advisory group, said such "enhanced recovery processes" might — with luck — contribute substantial new supplies of oil.

The report indicated that by the end of this century the United States could recover about 28 billion barrels of oil from existing oil fields.

Campus editor chosen

Omaha senior Sandy Mohr has been chosen editor-in-chief for the spring semester of The Daily Nebraskan, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln student newspaper.

The appointment was made at a Thursday night meeting of the UNL Publications Board. Editor-elect Mohr is a journalism major and a political science minor. She has previously been a reporter and news editor at the campus newspaper.

Newspaper owner dies

Services will be in Hollywood Hills, Calif. for Walter J. Herbes, 86, of Glendale, Calif. who died Thursday.

Born in Osmond, Herbes owned and operated weekly newspapers in Lindsay, Ulysses, Shelby, and Osceola. He also published the Polk Progress with his son, Howard.

Survivors beside his son, Howard, are daughters Maxine Herbes and Mrs. Zona O'Connor.

Iowan dies in truck crash

Lyons (UPI) — Melvin V. Neil, 62, La Porte City, Iowa, was killed Thursday in a traffic accident five miles north of Lyons at the intersection of U.S. 77 and Nebraska 51.

The State Patrol says Neil's truck collided with a truck driven by Alan Walter, 20, Hector, Minn.

CBers target cerebral palsy

By Gracia McAndrew
Star Staff Writer

Citizens' band radio buffs are at it again. Last year they put their hobby to work collecting donations for muscular dystrophy. So far this year they have helped raise funds for the families of two cancer victims.

Now, area CBers have taken up the banner "CBers for Cerebral Palsy," and they are working to collect money to reopen the cerebral palsy children's center.

According to Deanna Coalson, executive director of United Cerebral Palsy of Nebraska, the infant development and preschool program center had to close recently due to lack of funds.

Housed in the basement of St. Luke United Methodist Church, 1621 Superior, the center provided needed physical and educational therapy to infant and preschool cerebral palsy children.

Caused by brain damage occurring before, during or shortly after birth, cerebral palsy is characterized by varying degrees of muscle control difficulty.

Masterminds behind the effort to reopen the center's doors are Frank "Shiloh" Moles and Emmett "Stomper" Chrisley, both CB enthusiasts. The two have enlisted several other area CBers and interested persons. While their band of supporters is growing daily, they are anxious to receive additional CB club participation from throughout the state. And Stomper and Shiloh are sure they'll get it.

"CBers are a class of people that if one gets in trouble, we all help," Stomper explained.

"CBers work together like a family," Shiloh added. "Stomper and I decided to have an old-fashioned, family CB break. (that's gathering in CB lingo), so we decided to have a party."

Also, since the group "had fun" while working together for muscular dystrophy and because they knew Deanna Coalson and her husband, Clyde Coalson, as fellow CBers; they decided to incorporate a fund-raising drive into the party plans.

While the planning may be at times "tedious," Shiloh said, "I don't care how mean a person is; if you have any kind of heart at all, when you see those kids (with cerebral palsy) you can't help but feel you're doing something good."

"Like Chris and I, who are holding three or four-jobs just to make ends meet. When we see those kids who worked so hard to take three steps more than they could two months ago, we feel as good as if we had $1,000."

Both men are accustomed to and enjoy working with children: Stomper, a father of six children, is a full-time custodian at East High School and owns Cornhusker Two-Way. Shiloh was a fireman with the Lincoln Fire Department for 12 years and now is part owner of the Stockade Lounge. Also the owner of Shiloh Family Entertainment Enterprises, he is the father of two children.

Financially backed by the two organizers, the Christmas party will be held from 6 to 11:30 p.m. Sunday in the Lincoln National Guard Armory. Open to the public of all ages, the party will feature the Jack Nolan Road Show providing music, a lunch and non-alcoholic refreshments.

Special guests at the party will be University of Nebraska Athletic Director Bob Devaney, Mayor Helen Boosalis, City Councilwoman Sue Bailey, Miss Linda of KOLN's "Romper Room" and Mighty Jimmy (Jim King of Crete, a victim of cancer of the lymph glands, for whom the CBers raised money for hospital expenses last July).

An additional attraction will be the McLaren Special race car which will be on display at the party. Sponsored by Hy-Gain Electronics Corp., the car, which was driven by Johnny Rutherford, won the 1976 Indianapolis 500.

"We are expecting a good turnout," Stomper said. "CBers are really pulling together, working together."

Mrs. Coalson is hoping the drive will put $30,000 in the center's till, enabling the program to be re-established for a full year: Stomper and Shiloh are confident the fund drive will hit the $50,000 mark.

"As of last March, there were 53,000 licensed CBers in the state," Shiloh explained. "And I don't think there is a CBER in the state of Nebraska who wouldn't give you a dollar," Stomper added.

Although the party is still a few days away, several events involving area citizens' band groups have already contributed $1,765 to the center's fund.

The effort to put the center back on solid ground has "mushroomed." A Holdrege CBER known as "Mama Duck" collected $680 from others in Holdrege, Falls City, Fairbury, Auburn and other nearby cities.

In addition to the party, Shiloh and Stomper have scheduled four CB breaks at the Stockade Lounge. During these breaks, a percentage of money taken in is contributed to the drive fund.

The initial break Nov. 22 raised a total of $403. The spirit of fun is always present during these events: $205 of the $403 raised came from auctioning off a birthday cake which was thrown in the face of one lucky CBER.

There have been other cake and pie throwing challenges with a "few" bucks attached, and other communities have begun plans for their own charitable breaks.

The remaining breaks in Lincoln will be held Dec. 13 and 20.

These books for coffee table

By Jim Camden

Book Review

Most books reviewed rise or fall on their literary qualities. But for a number of books the words are merely incidental.

These volumes, known as coffee table books, or art books, or large books, rank in price just below bound lawbooks and usually way above the average bestseller.

A coffee table book's price, and usually its popularity, depends mostly on the number and quality of color plates contained between covers. Words are often used to explain what a certain painting or photograph is, who is responsible for it, and occasionally, how it was created. All other verbiage is usually contained in a foreword, an afterword or a note about the author.

These books are often perused by bored guests or waiting relatives who have lots of time to look, but little inclination to read.

They may become status symbols or conversation pieces, and their covers grace many tables on the chance that they blend with the room's decor.

Be that as it may, coffee table books occupy an important niche in American publishing, and an equally important spot in Christmas giving. A really fine art book is a true treasure, even if a poor one is just an expensive piece of junk.

This year's selection of large books offers an interesting array of art and history, the two main areas such books cover.

American Indians are popular subjects this year with two excellent volumes devoted to their study.

"Edward Sheriff Curtis: Visions of a Vanishing Race," is a collection of photos taken by the renowned Indian photographer. The text, written by Curtis's daughter Florence Graybill and Victor Boesen, tells of the many forays into Indian domains made by the photographer between 1904-30. A portfolio of more than 100 prints made from Curtis's original glassplate negatives and prints follows the text.

A different tact is taken by "People of the First Man," an account of an 1833-34 expedition up the Missouri River by German Prince Maximilian and Swiss artist Karl Bodmer. Bodmer's water colors show the trading posts along the river, including Bellevue, and the Plains Indians in all phases of life. The text contains excerpts from the Prince's logbook.

"People" is a look at the Plains Indians at the height of their glory; Curtis's sepia prints often show the native Americans in the shadow of bygone days. Both are good investments, at $25 and $29.95, respectively.

A couple of photography books seem destined for brisk sales. "Images of Women" by Robert Farber is by far the better of the two, with about 50 shots of sensuous nudes. This volume includes explanations on form, composition, texture and lighting to satisfy the serious photographer, but the real mainstay is the soft-focus prints that form a haunting collection.

"Photographing America," released by the Eastman Kodak Company, also has tips on photography, as well as some good pictures. But it also contains a number of cliché pictures and seems to be more of an incentive to buy film and "Go out and try this one yourself."

More seasonal in nature is "The Christmas Tree Book" by Phillip V. Snyder, a history of yule trees and their decorations. This is a helpful book to have around when, after spending $15 on a scrawny fir, you wonder who started this crazy custom. It might, however, make a better pre-Christmas gift, for interest may wane as December draws to a close. The book is well illustrated, although the cost is apparently kept down by having only about 20 pages of color plates.

For the fans of Norman Rockwell, there is yet another book with the workings of that artist. "Norman Rockwell Saturday Evening Post Volume I" is a collection of his magazine covers from 1916-28. Be warned, however, if you plan to give this as a Christmas present: you may be stuck with giving Volumes II and III in upcoming years at a cost of around $40 apiece.

The penultimate art book for this season is probably "Wyeth at Kuerners," a collection of more than 300 watercolor and pencil sketches by one of America's top artists. The Kuerners' farm in Pennsylvania is one of Wyeth's two main inspirations, and the book covers many of the same subjects from different angles. Wyeth's wife Betsy wrote the introduction which very few people will read in their rush to look at the splendid watercolors.

A final word about coffee table books. Although their prices may seem high, many are priced to sell at Christmas. They will cost even more in January. Wyeth's book will go from $60 to $75; Curtis's to $35 and "People" to $29.95.

Just a little added incentive from the publishers.

Chicago attacks toys that squeak too loud

Chicago (AP) — Chicago's consumer sales commissioner took on Santa Claus last week, sending 80 agents through stores tracking down toy animals that squeak too loudly.

"It all started when one of our inspectors took home a rubber lion for his small daughter," said the commissioner, Jane Byrne.

"The child rolled over on the toy and the squeak was exceptionally loud. The inspector measured the noise and it was 100 decibels. So now we are cleaning off the counters of toys not only considered dangerous but also too loud."

The city's noise abatement ordinance allows a maximum sound level of 85 decibels one foot away. Decibels are units for measuring sound intensity — zero is the lowest, 30 feet from a riveting machine would be about 100, at 120 the ears begin to hurt.

Ms. Byrne said her inspectors are armed with decibel readers and will test the squeaks on the spot, bringing violators to the consumer lab for further testing.

The culprits mainly are toy pigs, cats, dogs, clowns, lions and lambs ranging in size from 5 to 8 inches, she said.

There were indications, an assistant said, that merchants are removing the questionable items from their shelves voluntarily. He said there could be thousands of the loud squeakers involved.

Ms. Byrne said two toy films apparently produced the offending animals in an effort to comply with safety regulations. They made the squeakers larger so they could be more securely anchored in the toys to prevent children from pulling them loose and swallowing them. But in making them bigger, she said, the manufacturers made them louder.

Ms. Byrne singled out Louis A. Boettiger Co., of Hewlett, N.Y., and Childhood Interests of Roselle Park, N.J.

She said the manufacturers advised that the toys were not meant to have moderate pressure exerted for their squeaks, but were "intended for little baby hands."

Boettiger's vice president, Mel Young, said he was "stunned" by Ms. Byrne's action.

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a man I work with. The problem is his wife. Every time he starts to tell her he wants a divorce, she gets herself pregnant and he decides that he can't go through with it.

This is the third time she's pulled that on him, Abby, and I am tired of waiting for him, but I can't break it off because I love him too much.

He is 34 and I'm 20, but I've been on my own since I was 15. We've been seeing each other for three years. I could get another man real fast, but I don't want anyone but him. I know he loves me because he's so jealous, he's threatened to mess up my face if I go out on him.

Do you think he'll ever leave his wife and marry me? Am I foolish to wait for him? What should I do?

DEAR ABBY: When I go to my doctor for my blood pressure checkup, he always checks my breasts for cancer as well. We both belong to the same country club. I wonder if he thinks he is doing me a favor, or if he is doing himself one.

As far as I know, there is no cancer in my family, and I read somewhere that people with high blood pressure don't usually have cancer.

Do you think I should change doctors?

DEAR ANXIOUS: He is doing YOU a favor, not himself. He sounds like a very competent physician, but if the fact that you see him socially inhibits you, you'd be wise to change country clubs!

DEAR ABBY: I was married to Jim eight years ago. We had two sons, then we were divorced. Two years later Jim married my younger sister. They had twin daughters.

My question: Are my sons and my sister's twin daughters just first cousins? Or are they more closely related?

You have to figure out the bid

By B. Jay Becker

Your right-hand opponent bids One Spade, both sides vulnerable. What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠A36 ♥Q9 ♦KQJ4 ♣A983
2. ♠A75 ♥J8753 ♣A8 ♣A64
3. ♠10 ♥AKJ972 ♣A83 ♣KJ7
4. ♠K8 ♥5 ♦AQJ92 ♣AQ762

1. One notrump. This is by far the best way of identifying the type of hand you hold. You have the values for a double, of course, but that would suggest better distribution. The notrump overall shows 16 to 18 points, balanced distribution, and at least one stopper in the adverse suit.

2. Pass. It would be dangerous to bid two hearts with such a shaky suit, because, if the next player doubled, the outcome might prove disastrous.

Overcalls should be based primarily on how many tricks you can take, not on how many points you have. The safety of the overall is nearly always the first consideration. True, this hand would rank as an opening bid as dealer — before the relative strength of the other three hands is known — but once your right-hand opponent makes an opening bid, you should tread cautiously. The bidding may develop so that you can enter the fray later on more safely, but until then it's best to play possum.

3. Double. Your hand is much too good for an overall of two hearts. While it's true that overcalls at the two level represent good hands, still there's a limit to how strong they can be. This hand exceeds that limit. A double potentially shows a much stronger hand than an overall.

Change the ace of diamonds to the deuce and you'd have a typical two heart bid. To show you have about an ace more than that, you double first and then bid hearts. This makes it possible for your partner to distinguish between bids that are aimed at getting to game and those aiming at a part score.

4. Two diamonds. Here you have the high-card values for a double, but it is tactically better to overcall with two diamonds. If you doubled, there would be too much danger of finding yourself unable to show both minor suits later on. Your partner is likely to respond to a double in hearts, and you lack support for that suit.

It is better to run the risk of being dropped at two diamonds, risking the loss of a problematical minor-suit game, than to run the danger of landing in the wrong contract by losing valuable bidding space with a double. Practical considerations frequently outweigh technical requirements.

PSC admits changes needed

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

No laws are needed to change Public Service Commission operational and decision-making practices, indicates a PSC response delivered Thursday to the Legislature.

Conceding some internally initiated change in four broad areas could be beneficial to the public, the PSC however defended its methods and procedures in 10 others that were put under the microscope.

Legislative staffers criticized or found lacking the PSC regulatory approach in 14 topics listed as findings prepared for the 1977 Appropriations Committee.

The response is the second to the 205-page reports, result of a 1976 legislative resolution ordering a review of PSC official conduct and funding areas.

Proposed laws could result.

The reports found no evidence the PSC regularly reviewed phone companies' compliance with rate orders. The PSC admitted that area "is deficient" and commissioners "should re-examine methods of improving our procedures."

The PSC members also agreed with a finding the agency should take remedial action if a telephone company earns a rate of return exceeding that authorized.

The Unicameral study, however, noted the PSC has no written procedures to learn if the profit limit was violated, and no rules or policy on how much is reasonable. The response said the PSC requires offending companies to improve service with the excess earnings, because that serves ratepayers better than reducing rates.

There is no method to ensure companies comply with PSC-set telephone service standards or improvements, the reports found. The primary standard, commissioners responded, is the "trouble index" which "should possibly be improved" by changing PSC rules and regulations.

Although the PSC doesn't require periodic trouble reporting and has no policy on statewide, random spot checks of phone systems, the response claimed "a good job" achieved after any complaints.

To a finding the commission has no timetable for statewide service improvements, the PSC said it has used deadlines in ordering standards. Yet members conceded "There perhaps is merit to requiring plans" sometimes, which the PSC "will investigate." They warned against "unrealistic" expectations to avoid ordering improvements the public doesn't want.

In a laundry list of public convenience items, the PSC responded that the $10 charge to file a formal complaint or application isn't prohibitive. Notice of phone company rate proposals is satisfactory, the reply said.

Commissioners were receptive to adopting suggestions that phone directories contain a description of PSC functions and how to contact the agency, that phone companies must inform complainants they may turn to the PSC for help and that notices of rate hearings be inserted in telephone bills.

Inserting a descriptive notice about authorizing truck operations, saying the PSC must retain flexibility because companies vary; likewise in judgments about reasonable rates of return.

The PSC also defended as adequate the use of its staff in reviewing rates and services. It opposed as "unrealistic" any new legal requirement to inspect all phone exchanges annually.

To a finding the PSC doesn't always consider phone service in rate hearings and orders, commissioners agreed, but only when no complaints or protests were lodged. Service consideration is "very important" and the PSC said it will include an analysis in each rate action granted.

The PSC in bill mailings "would be more expensive and less effective" than the phone directory proposal, the response said. And it opposed establishing a "public counsel" to represent consumers before agency proceedings.

Commissioners defended their practice of case-by-case judgments in setting phone and trucking rates and

Rasmussen questions hiring legality

Round No. 2 in the Public Service Commission staff hiring fireworks ignited Thursday. And the disagreement apparently hasn't fizzled yet.

Commissioners clashed in a lively showdown last Tuesday, resulting in a 3-1 vote to hire Lincolnite G. Bruce Eriksen, 25, for the PSC budget-research director job to open up soon. Eriksen had applied four days earlier, hadn't submitted a resume and had met only two of the five commissioners.

Eric Rasmussen of Fairmont, who voted against Eriksen's immediate hiring, said Thursday the PSC "may have violated the Equal Opportunity Act," a federal law, "by not advertising the vacancy." That lit the fuse again.

Rasmussen moved to reconsider the Tuesday hiring and to make certain the PSC complied with the law before making Eriksen's employment final. "That's ambiguous as hell!" Omaha Commissioner James Munnally said. "You're saying the action was illegal."

That might be the case, Rasmussen said Munnally. "You'll have to spell out to us that we erred." He "will no longer tolerate" what he described as Rasmussen's "implications" of PSC impropriety.

Rasmussen asked PSC Secretary Everett Green if the job vacancy had been advertised. Green said, "Not to my knowledge."

Munnally recounted Eriksen's statement he had "read about it publicly," and said "whether we did it... or it was a news item" doesn't matter. "There's no question about it being a public notice."

Munnally went on, "You're either going to have to make an accusation to me" of illegal procedure or drop it. "I don't find I'm in error." He said Rasmussen's motion is "not valid at this time" and any accusation "is going to have to be based on the facts."

"You are telling me I discriminated" in the Eriksen hiring, Munnally said, allowing that he "would reconsider" if that's proved, because he's "open-minded."

Rasmussen said, "My concern is to try to protect the commission." He also referred to a posted policy statement that says the agency will provide equal employment opportunities for its employees and applicants based on principles and methods defined in state and federal laws.

The policy provides for periodic review to ensure that equity is afforded "and corrective action taken" if failure is indicated in achieving "optimum utilization of minority and female personnel."

Munnally said "I'm tired of your (Rasmussen's) internal bickering" and "working for candidates." That was an apparent reference to defeated PSC nominee Joyce Durand, who since resigned as budget-research head.

After a recess, Rasmussen reported that the PSC hasn't a copy of the law, but "There is room for question" in the Eriksen matter. He withdrew his motion to reconsider but said he'll continue in trying to determine if the PSC hiring was "absolutely correct."

Rasmussen said the "problem is, we do receive some federal funds," and thus must comply with federal laws and rules. Non-compliance can jeopardize those funds.

LaVista man accused of three robberies

A LaVista man is being held in the city-county jail in lieu of $25,000 bond after being arraigned in Lancaster County Court Thursday for robbing two grocery stores and a pawn shop.

Larry L. Sharp, 35, was charged with three counts of robbery and three counts of using a firearm to commit a felony.

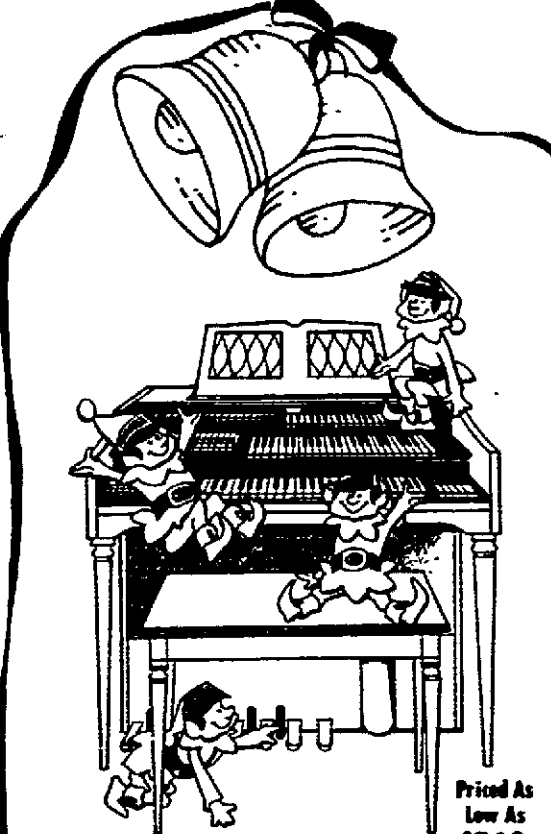

Sharp was arrested by Lincoln police Wednesday afternoon shortly after a man robbed the managers of the Hinky-Dinky and Safeway grocery stores. In both robberies the man used a .38-caliber revolver.

Sharp is accused of obtaining that weapon in a robbery of the Royal Pawn Shop on Oct. 19 when pawn shop owner Nathan Bernstein was hit on the head. Two revolvers were taken from the pawn shop.

Sharp is accused of robbing George Hill of the 25th and O St. Hinky-Dinky store of around $250.

He also is charged with robbing Larry Stutzman, manager of the Safeway Store at 1265 S. Cotner Blvd., of about $3,000.

County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront fixed Sharp's bond at $25,000 and scheduled Sharp's next court appearance for Dec. 21 when a preliminary hearing date will be set.

Omahans save boys from fire

Omaha (UPI) — A district fire chief has credited the actions of two Omaha Housing Authority employees with saving two boys from possible serious injury during an apartment fire.

Chief John Green said Nathaniel Joiner and Fred Perry saw smoke coming from an apartment Wednesday at the authority's Spencer-Hilltop homes in North Omaha.

Green said the two ran inside the apartment and grabbed the four and five-year-old sons of Mrs. Mary Woods, the apartment tenant.

Green said the bedroom where the two boys were apparently playing with matches was gutted.

The boys' grandmother was staying with them, Green said, but she had left for a nearby grocery store at the time of the incident.

Green said the entire apartment received smoke and water damage.

Park grounds to be Standing Bear memorial

The creation of the Standing Bear Memorial Grounds in Sawyer-Snell Park was recommended Thursday by the Lincoln Park and Recreation Board.

The idea had first been proposed by the Lincoln Indian Community in September following a successful three-day pow-wow in the park.

Initial plans called for designating the site a permanent place for pow-wows and other community activities, according to Bob Lasey, head of the community group.

The group had first hoped to rename the entire park, but City Park Director Don Smith said there was opposition to that move since the land had originally been donated by Mrs. A. J. Sawyer and Mrs. N. Z. Snell.

The park is somewhat unusual in that it is divided into three parcels by South St. and Park Blvd. Smith said the proposed renaming of one parcel the Standing Bear Memorial Grounds follows a precedent set when another of the three parcels was named Sherman Field.

Lasey said the group plans a fund-raising drive so a flag pole and permanent arena can be built on the 20-acre grounds to host sun dances and pow-wows on a regular basis. The parks department hopes to add rest rooms in the park, he added.

Long range plans call for a building to house Indian community meetings and a museum, he said, but "we're going to take it as it comes."

Smith noted that any of the facilities on the grounds will be open to all members of the public.

Standing Bear's name was etched in history through the cooperation of a sympathetic Army general, a crusading Omaha journalist and two young Omaha lawyers.

In 1876 the government moved the Poncas from their homes on the Niobrara River in northeast Nebraska to some reservation territory in Oklahoma. Nearly 160 people died during the long journey and many longed to return to their homeland.

Standing Bear and a small group of friends walked back to Nebraska to bury his son who died in Oklahoma. An Omaha tribe gave food and shelter to the group but they were harassed by federal troops and finally imprisoned at old Fort Omaha.

A federal judge decided that the Poncas should be free and allowed to remain in Nebraska, in an historic decision which said, in part, "An Indian is a person within the meaning of the laws of the United States."

Hyde Observatory planned

A $50,000 memorial apparently will result in the construction of an observatory in Holmes Park, the Lincoln Parks and Recreation Board learned Thursday.

The board later recommended to the City Council that the observatory be named the Hyde Memorial Observatory in honor of A. Leicester Hyde.

Hyde, former president of the Midwest Life Insurance Co. died last year.

The development culminates two and one-half years of effort by a group of Lincolinites who banded together to create the facility.

Plans call for a concrete building northwest of the clubhouse on the Holmes Golf Course which would house a classroom and an observatory with 14, 10 and 8 inch telescopes

The roof of the observatory will be constructed so it can protect the instruments in inclement weather, then roll away to permit telescopic viewing, according to Carroll Moore of the City Observatory Committee.

The observatory itself will measure about 30 feet long and 15 feet wide, Moore said. The classroom will be about 30 feet by 30 feet square.

Moore said the group of Lincolinites has now gathered $68,000 toward the total $70,000 cost of the structure.

He said that the group hopes construction can begin as soon next spring as weather will permit, with the observatory completed during the summer.

The City Parks and Recreation Department will then take over maintenance of the building.

Moore stressed that the observatory will be open for use by the general public. The committee, he said, has been working with officials at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Nebraska Wesleyan University, Union College and Lincoln public and parochial schools.

The Lincoln Junior League and the Amateur Astronomy Club of Lincoln will help operate the observatory, Moore said.

College expanding 84th St. site

The Nebraska Southeast Community Technical College agreed Thursday to purchase additional land near its 84th and O St. site in an attempt to get mayoral approval of that site for a future technical college location.

The board has already agreed to buy 117 acres of land for their main Lincoln campus, but wants city annexation of the land in order to get city water and sewer services.

Mayor Helen Boosalis, worried about the possible future use of the land on the corner of 84th and O Sts., adjacent to the SeTech land, has suggested that the college acquire the additional 10 corner acres before she agrees to annexation.

Instead the board agreed to purchase about 2.7 acres of the corner lot from owner Ken Clark. The remaining land is being considered by another buyer for a use that carries the mayor's approval, according to SeTech Board discussion.

Liz's honeymoon extended

Tel Aviv (UPI) — Liz Taylor and John Warner plan to extend their honeymoon Thursday for more sightseeing, including a visit to the ancient windswept fortress of Masada.

The newlyweds had planned to leave Israel for London Friday morning after attending a 6-dollar-a-person Variety Club charity banquet Thursday night.

Instead, weather permitting, they planned to go to Masada, overlooking the bleak Dead Sea, the site of the last stand of a few hundred Jewish warriors during a rebellion against the Romans in 71 A.D.

County road questions still lacking answers

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

The one hour mass meeting stretched to almost three hours. When it was over, the basic questions raised by the County Board were still unanswered.

Will Old Cheney Road be closed between 14th and 1st Sts. anytime in the next 10 to 15 days the board asked. No answer was given.

Should a study of an eastern two-lane bypass to replace 84th St. be put into the county's six-year road plan and thus included on the Comprehensive Plan, the Board asked. The answer was either yes or no depending on who was talking.

And the unanswered questions leave little doubt that verbal clashes will continue between the county commissioners and Engineer Marv Nuernberger on these two projects.

The Old Cheney Road question was raised after commissioners learned that Nuernberger intended to build a new $225,000 bridge on the road — a road that might be closed within 20 years.

The board wanted the closing question answered before they made a decision on the bridge. And basically the question Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton raised Thursday was should Old Cheney Road be closed or should it remain open as a major street and connector to the future West Bypass.

After a series of defeated motions, the group of council members, commissioners, planning commission members and mayor, in some weariness, skirted the basic issue and voted to keep Old Cheney Road open as a local street and to build the bridge in question.

This action by the group is not binding and leaves to the County Board the question of

Snow plans fight against child abuse

Cleveland, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Hank Snow, campaigning to help victims of child abuse, assembled some of the big names in country music in Cleveland on Thursday night to raise money for the Melisha Gibson Child Center, named for a 4-year-old girl who died in October.

Snow told reporters his plans for aiding abused children are more long-range than the benefit appearance. He said he has asked a leading authority on child abuse, Dr. C. Henry Kempe of Denver, for help in setting up a national foundation for abused children.

Snow said he hopes to finance the foundation with an annual telethon, similar to Jerry Lewis' work for muscular dystrophy. "Child abuse claims a lot more victims each year than muscular dystrophy," said Snow.

whether to put in a new bridge on a road that might be closed in the future.

The group also agreed to ask the technical committee to study the need for a eastern replacement for 84th St., under the direction of Nuernberger.

The technical committee composed of state, federal and local road officials and planners, including Nuernberger, is an advisory arm of the street planning process.

If a need for a two-lane limited-access road to the east of 84th St. is shown, the technical committee would then study possible alternate routes, their cost and environmental consequences.

Under Nuernberger and federal highway official Ray Hogrefe's interpretation this means that the county — or some combined government funds — would have to be spent for the actual corridor study.

The technical committee has neither the authority to conduct this detailed physical study nor the authority to contract for such a study, Hogrefe said.

Thus Nuernberger's department would need approval and funds, primarily through County Board approval of the project on the county's six-year road plan.

But Derald Kohles of the State Roads Department and a technical committee member and Commissioner Jan Gauger disagreed. Kohles said that a limited type of corridor study can be done by the technical committee, under Nuernberger's direction.

However he feels that the issue may never come to a corridor study.

Information already gathered by the technical committee has shown that there will be no need for a major street east of 84th St. for the next 25 years, Kohles said.

Speed limit said constitutional

The 55-mile an hour speed limit law appears to be constitutional, Nebraska Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas said Thursday. "I don't think there's a problem," Douglas said, based on a preliminary investigation conducted after meeting with his Justice Department attorneys. They discussed the recent U.S. District Court opinion in which Judge Robert V. Denney held unconstitutional a 1976 drive-in bank law, because the Legislature didn't allow the prescribed number of days between introducing and approving the bill. The constitutional time provision cast doubt on the validity of the speed limit legislation and pay raises for state judges, laws speeded through or procedurally juggled via bills that had other subjects. The Justice Department is "still tracing" aspects of the judges' pay boost law, Douglas said. "We picked out what we think are major pieces of legislation the last three years to trace, and see if there's a problem with any of them." Douglas said he initiated the Justice Department independent review because of the court ruling. "The problem," if it can be called that, he noted, is "Nobody has asked" for his opinion on any measures. On another matter, Douglas said he will grant Bellwood State Sen. Loran Schmit's request to investigate the "First New York Commodity Option Co.," to learn if it's operating within Nebraska laws. Schmit said he is "convinced that the operation is not a legitimate one."

Man held in theft of beer truck

Twenty kegs of beer and a Falstaff beer sign were found in an abandoned trailer near Eagle. More beer was found near S. 2nd and Salt Creek. A beer truck was recovered in Lincoln Thursday morning. The beer and truck once were together in the Lincoln Beer Distribution Co. garage at 500 Garfield. Police said one man is in custody and police are looking for others in connection with the theft of the delivery truck loaded with beer around midnight Wednesday. Police said the suspects kicked out a panel in an overhead door, took a set of keys off a peg board on the wall and drove the delivery truck out of the building. The truck was valued at $10,000 and the kegs and cans of beer were worth $1,000. The kegs and beer sign were recovered by the Nebraska State Patrol about one half mile south of Eagle. The truck was found in Lincoln Thursday morning near 9th and E St., while more beer was found near Salt Creek. Police said the remainder of the beer was located at the home of the person taken into custody.

Folger's ups coffee price

San Francisco (AP) — Folger's said Wednesday it is raising its wholesale price of coffee by 20 cents, boosting the cost to $2.88 a pound. The increase, however, is not expected to reach consumers until next year.

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — On a snowy day in New York, the respected New York Sun received a letter from little Virginia: "Is there a Santa Claus?"

Some of her little pals said Santa was fake, she said. Virginia sent her letter because, "Daddy says if you see it in the Sun, it's so."

Francis Pharcellus Church, an editorial writer, sat down and answered. His words ring down the years: "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus!"

The editor of the Sun was the great Charles Dana. And I often wondered why he turned the job over to Francis. That line — "Daddy says if you see it in the Sun, it's so" — surely would have touched him. Why didn't he write it himself?

Now I think Charles Dana was looking for a place to park. He was still driving around the block at deadline time. Francis took over.

Merry Christmas to all! (Will there be a parking space for the sleigh when Santa comes to our house?)

Low gear. Red light. Green light. No left turn. No right turn. "Sorry, full." "Vehicles parked in this zone will be towed away."

Yellow curb. White curb. Red curb. Ten-minute zone.

"No parking this side of the street today, S.F.P.D."

"No, Madam. I saw that space first. Of course I pulled ahead. I always back into a parking place. Go ahead and blow your police whistle."

"Mack the Knife is back in town."

Good thing when they put me together again they gave me bionic nerves. An ordinary man would go raving mad.

I wonder. If I put the car on the sidewalk. Put a note under the wiper: "Out of gas. Have gone to service station." No. I suppose not.

These meter maids have no sense of humor.

"No, officer, I was not double-parking. I had something in my eye. I stopped for a minute. Just a minute to get it out. Of course, I'm moving on. Right now."

(If it wasn't Christmas time, I'd read him off. I'm a good friend of the mayor's.)

Traffic at this time of year is what makes criminals of law-abiding citizens.

Probably what caused all the trouble in the Old West. No space at the hitching rack. The Stranger could not park his horse. He therefore double-parked his horse.

The Sheriff gave him a ticket. Then it was only a step to cattle rustling.

After Francis Pharcellus Church (what a byline!) wrote that famous line, he continued with rhetoric I cannot understand to this day.

Big words were Francis's stock in trade. I bet little Virginia didn't understand either.

Francis is printed in all the anthologies. (Outside, Charles Dana went around the block again.)

Dogs being killed in rabies scare

Jerusalem (AP) — Police have killed 11 dogs this week and Jerusalem is experiencing its worst rabies scare in memory.

A small white dog wearing a ragged collar was blamed for spreading the disease. Police tracked the dog from one side of the city to the other and shot it Wednesday.

The city's veterinary service said dozens of people and animals were bitten, and other undiscovered cases were feared. The service said stray dogs would be shot on sight.

Housing Authority still apart

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Housing Authority should broaden its responsibility to cover the entire county, local government officials decided Thursday.

The decision came as the County Board, City Council, the Lincoln mayor, and City-County Planning Commission met en masse to put the polishing touches on the Comprehensive Plan.

The Comprehensive Plan is a so-called blueprint for the future that officials can refer to for the next 24 years when making decisions on community growth.

The idea that had been voiced earlier this week of making the Housing Authority a part of city and county government died on the vine.

The suggestion had been pushed by Mayor Helen Boosalis, who contended that all agencies dealing with housing (such as the Urban Development Department) should be linked.

"Only then can you get the most out of your tax dollars," she contended.

Housing Authority Director Dick Burke argued, however, that the community "is never going to have a better arrangement than we have now."

Burke claimed the only good that would come from local government absorbing the agency would be to make the arrangement look good organizationally on paper.

He was supported by Councilman Bob Sikyta, who said that a move to make the authority a part of local government assumed that the authority and existing agencies dealing with housing matters couldn't work together. "I think they can," Sikyta said.

The group, which has a total of 20 voting members also decided that the Comprehensive Plan should advise future officials that taxes should only be used to improve local housing when the private sector couldn't get the job done.

On another matter the group brushed aside arguments from County Engineer Marvin Nuernberger on an 11-6 vote and decided to stick with road improvement plans which differ from those on a plan used in applying for federal funding.

Nuernberger also saw his plans ignored when the officials decided to schedule road improvements on Superior and N.W. 48th before other improvements in Northeast Lincoln on Havelock and 112th St.

Obviously frustrated by this turn of events Nuernberger told them, "You're out of step with everyone else."

The group also stuck with planned shopping centers at 27th and Pine Lake Road and 56th and Old Cheney despite a last-minute plea by County Board member Bruce Hamilton on behalf of promoters of a shopping center at 40th and Old Cheney.

Hamilton argued that if the shopping center at 27th and Pine Lake Road was denied and the 40th and Old Cheney location approved, it would mean that 27th would not have to be widened past Old Cheney and Pine Lake Rd. could be two lanes instead of four.

The wrap-up session on the Comprehensive Plan will take place tomorrow when the Planning Commission meets to give one last look at the document and the issues that have been voted on by the combined group of elected officials.

Petition asks recall of three on city council

Chadron (AP) — Some Chadron citizens are circulating petitions asking for the recall of three city council members under a state law prohibiting public employees from holding that office.

At a meeting Monday night, the citizens unsuccessfully called for the resignation of council members Mary Horse and James Schaeffer, and asked that incumbent Ronald Busch not be reelected.

Mrs. Horse is a first-grade teacher, Schaeffer is a political science professor at Chadron State College and Busch works at the college business administration office.

The petition submits the names of Donald Toczek, Milton Grantham and John Ross as council successors. Ross and Toczek were unsuccessful candidates for the council in November and Ross was among those calling for the resignations.

Lincoln Foundation assists new zoo

By Linda Olig
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Foundation bought into the new Children's Zoo complex Thursday.

The foundation board and advisory committee approved a $15,000 grant request for equipment and construction of the diet kitchen portion of the complex.

The new facility, to be constructed in an unused area of Antelope Park, behind the Children's Zoo, also will include a laboratory and hospital room, concessions area, winter quarters, a nocturnal animal display and zoo offices.

The zoo, managed by the Arnett R. Folsom Zoological Society, is in the midst of a $500,000 fund drive to raise money. Half of the funds are for the new complex, the other half for a capital growth program.

The drive is nearing its first $250,000 in five-year pledges, Alan Bietz, zoo director, told the Lincoln Foundation board.

The new complex is "not an enlargement or something nice," he said, "but an absolute requirement of the" U.S. Department of Agriculture which has indicated the zoo's license could be in jeopardy if the present structure isn't replaced within a year.

The board also denied a $26,835 request from Nebraska Wesleyan University for computer equipment to support social science research using local data.

In other action, the foundation approved —A $1,500 request from the Lincoln City Library Foundation toward the purchase of a $3,000 bookcase in memory of the late George W. Holyoke.

—A $2,500 grant to the Lincoln Opportunities Industrialization Center, plus a $10,000 grant over the next two years as seed money. The latter grant is contingent on the center securing funds from another foundation and the Comprehensive Education and Training Act.

—A $3,000 special grant to the Lincoln Community Arts Council.

—The nomination of Mrs. Tyler Ryan to the foundation.

—Transferring $500 from the Heritage Foundation for Christmas gifts for underprivileged children.

Month's adjusted tax revenues up

September tax revenues and receipts increased in three of four categories compared to the same month a year ago, Nebraska Tax Commissioner William E. Peters said Thursday.

Sales tax cash revenue grew by 24.7%, bringing fiscal year-to-date growth to 17%. After considering the late summer emergency boost in tax rates, however, the increase is 3.9%, compared to 9.1% in the same period from 1974 to 1975.

Translated into dollars, net sales tax revenues in September were $15.66 million, up from $12.55 million a year earlier. Those sums are part of the fiscal year-to-date totals, $41.76 million 1976-77 and $35.71 million in 1975-76.

Individual income tax revenues this

September increased in a range of 12.7% to 27.7% more than those in September 1975. In the previous-year comparison, there was a 6.6% decline.

Total individual income tax receipts were $20.85 million, a jump from the September 1975 figure of $14.53 million. Respective fiscal year-to-date sums are $35.48 million and $25.34 million.

Corporate income tax receipts in September this year, $5.65 million, increased 38.4% over the nearly $4.1 million reported the same month in 1975. Peters said the per cent change, after considering the tax rate changes, can't be determined exactly, but the range is 11.9% to 14.9% for that period. The comparable growth rate from 1974 to 1975 was a 4.4% decline.

The corporate taxes to date this year produced almost $8.3 million, up from almost $6.7 million in the nine-month period in fiscal 1975-76.

Peters said total miscellaneous general fund taxes in September declined 9.9% from the same period a year ago. He cited increases in liquor and estate taxes and court fees, but a decline in the growth of cigarette and corporate occupation taxes and interest on investments.

In dollars, the September comparisons of "miscellaneous" totals declined from $3.3 million to $2.98 million, and the fiscal year-to-date totals decreased 5% from $16.19 million to $15.39 million.

Some farmers avoid federal Job Service

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

A U.S. Labor Department official Thursday confirmed reports that some farmers are "going around" the services of the federal Job Service because of new requirements that housing facilities have to be inspected.

"This came about because of attempts to upgrade facilities for migrant workers. Unfortunately, it is now applied to all workers on a farm. We are working hard to get this changed," said Don Pearson of the Kansas City Region 7 Labor Department office.

Pearson said several pages of regulations for adequate housing involved having 60 square feet of space for each occupant, minimum ceiling height, lighting and other requirements.

"There are two ways a farmer can get around the law. It doesn't apply if he is just furnishing room and board in his own home and it doesn't apply if he doesn't provide housing of any kind for his employee," he said.

In Nebraska, the housing and other health-related inspections are performed by the State Health Department under a contract with Job Service.

"People who used to come to us are finding other ways to hire people than through the Job Service. There is a lot of good housing in Nebraska for farm workers but there is also some that is really very inadequate. Much of this poor housing is being phased out of use, anyway," Pearson said.

In addition to causing farmers to drop housing for their employees, the law may make some employees worse off economically than they were under the old arrangement "but they probably are better housed," he said.

Pearson said a number of requirements in regulations by the Labor Department created problems in rural areas because they don't fill well on farms.

"One area that had a problem was applying migrant housing and other migrant regulations to combine crews. That one has been solved. Farmers and the department itself are working to change others," he said.

Vern Malolepszy, director of the Nebraska Division of Employment, explained workman's compensation laws and how they might affect a farmer.

"A farmer or rancher is normally exempt, but there are gray areas such as when he also operates a feedlot, does custom combining for a neighbor, exchanges work or operates a part-time business such as selling seed and feed as a small sideline," Malolepszy said.

A farmer can take out workmen's compensation insurance if he wishes, but if he decides to drop it he must put up posters announcing it in places where his employees can see it for 30 days before dropping it.

Russell Smith, assistant director of the wage-hour division of the State Labor Department, warned that farmers employing youth under 18 needed to know how old the kids are. "We don't have a requirement that you furnish proof of their age, but if you have a work permit from their school listing their age, it will be deemed to be an adequate effort on your part to determine their age even if the age on the certificate is wrong," he said.

Emery Nelson, Extension pesticide training coordinator, said he was changing a recommendation to county agents about training youngsters in handling pesticides.

"We first thought that we wouldn't train youngsters below 18 because they cannot be certified, but we will be sending out a recommendation to agents to train them anyway just for the safety information they get," he said.

One reason they were not to be trained is that under state law they can't be penalized for misuse of chemicals until they are 18, Nelson added.

"As it stands now, I think they will have to be supervised by a certified applicator even if they have had the training," Nelson said.

Nelson said he expected the Environmental Protection Agency to make public soon a list of pesticides it expects to ban from use by anyone who isn't certified as capable of handling them.

County agents across Nebraska will be offering the training courses to farmers and others interested in becoming certified early in the coming year.

Federal team visits proposed site

A six-member federal team visited Nebraska this week to evaluate a proposed site for the national Solar Energy Research Institute, according to Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan.

Whelan said the federal officials were "absolutely noncommittal" on Nebraska's chances of being chosen for the institute.

The officials were shown the proposed temporary center for the institute on the former John F. Kennedy College campus in Wahoo, and the proposed permanent site in Mead. They also toured the agriculture and engineering colleges at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Nebraska is one of 19 applicants for the solar energy program. Originally, the institute was to be located only at one site. Whelan said there is some indication the federal Energy Research and Development Administration will opt for two or more locations for the facility.

Train runs over York girl; she dies on way to hospital

Bradshaw (UPI) — Susan Vinyard, 17, daughter of Mayor and Mrs. Leroy Vinyard of York, was fatally injured Wednesday in the collision of the car in which she was riding and a Burlington Northern freight train at a mainstreet crossing in Bradshaw.

The York County sheriff's office said Miss Vinyard was a passenger in a car driven by Richard E. Keefer, 20, Bradshaw, who was treated for minor injuries and released from the York hospital.

Authorities said the train struck the right rear of the car, which was spun around, throwing Miss Vinyard and Keefer from their car. The train passed over Miss Vinyard's body. She was taken to the York Hospital and died en route to a Lincoln hospital.

Energy crisis not respected enough

Grand Island (UPI) — Rural and urban dwellers have failed to realize the seriousness of the energy crisis in the United States and had "better wise up," two energy conservation promoters said Thursday.

"I see nothing but doom and gloom, and unfortunately it takes too many years to sell ideas," said Steven Garst, of Coon Rapids, Iowa, who along with Robert Robel spoke at a news conference prior to the opening of the Mid Nebraska Farm Clinic at Ponner Park in Grand Island.

Robel, listed as the energy expert, is the project leader in Washington for an organization called Enhance Oil Recovery, and Garst, of Garst and Thomas, a seed company, discussed the more efficient use of agriculture products.

Garst said, "People aren't frightened enough that there is a (energy) problem, especially when we end up having a situation where we seemingly have a glut of food products on the market and aren't even paying the farmers the cost of production."

He and Robel contended food products are being wasted. Garst said only half of the country's harvested corn crop is used with the other half thrown away "and not utilized when we know there is a crying need for it. That disturbs me."

Robel said the United States is importing and using more oil than a year earlier. "We've had some discouraging news on oil because we'll have a 10 to 20% increase on oil prices," he said.

He said one way to make the consumer realize the seriousness of the fuel shortage is to raise gasoline prices up to $1.50 a gallon.

Garst and Robel also agreed that a proposal to use grain to produce gasohol is unworkable. "It seems a little shortsighted to be using food to produce energy for vehicles unless we can take the energy off and put it right back into the agriculture production. If we could use that energy to run irrigation pumps, it might be helpful, but I'm not wild about seeing it used to run a camper van down a highway."

Goldwater due in Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., will attend the Air Force Association awards luncheon at the Hilton Hotel Monday. It was announced Thursday. Goldwater is a retired Air Force reserve general and a member of the Air Force Association. While in Omaha, he will be briefed by the Strategic Air Command officials.

Deed presented

Columbus (AP) — A new library and city offices will be located in buildings purchased from Nebraska Public Power District. NPPD manager D. W. Hill and board member Dave Duren presented the deeds to Mayor George Johansen in ceremonies Thursday. Purchase price was $625,000.

Partee sentenced

Omaha (AP) — District Judge John Clark sentenced Roosevelt Partee to 25 years in the Nebraska Penal Complex for second degree murder. A jury last month found the 33-year-old Partee guilty in the beating death of his wife, Lela, last August. Police said the beating took place while Partee was free on bond on a misdemeanor charge of assault and battery upon his wife.

Measles count drops

Omaha (AP) — Measles rates in Nebraska have decreased despite a national trend of a 64% rise. There were 55 cases of measles reported in Nebraska through November, compared with 395 a year ago, health officials said.

Rate hike opposed

Washington (AP) — Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., Thursday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to reject a proposed 4% increase in railroad freight rates. "Rail lines west of the Mississippi were granted a 5% increase in October of this year," Mrs. Smith said in a letter to the commission. If the increase were approved, Mrs. Smith said an exemption should be granted for grain shipments.

Prisoners moved

Kearney (AP) — Inmates at the Buffalo County jail were moved Thursday because of plumbing problems. Glenn Schieve, chief deputy, said some toilets plugged this week and that when the situation worsened it was decided to transfer 10 inmates to the Custer County jail at Broken Bow and two inmates to the Kearney city jail. The Buffalo County jail is about 16 years old.

Proposed jail standards sent to Nebraska sheriffs

York (AP) — Nebraska sheriffs received this week a new draft of proposed statewide jail standards from the State Department of Correctional Services.

The draft was sent to prepare sheriffs for a series of regional Nebraska Sheriff's Association meetings this month and a Jan. 3 meeting in Grand Island between a sheriff committee and DCS standards administrator R. W. Cote.

At the Jan. 3 meeting, Cote said he will go over the proposed standards line by line with the sheriffs and he will do the same with representatives of the Nebraska Association of County Officials.

Before a series of public hearings across the state in late January or February, Cote will negotiate with officials affected by the standards to try to reach a "happy medium."

There will be at least one more draft of the standards before the hearings.

Cote said the most recent draft does not include the section entitled "Allowances for Existing Facilities," inserted into the planning roles for new jails.

The extra section would be a "grandfather clause" exempting existing jails from full compliance with state standards.

Instead Cote would evaluate and recommend changes to existing jails, then work out compromise rules with the local sheriff, district judge and governing board.

Karthauser expected back on job

Nebraska State Patrol Col. C. P. Karthauser is expected back on the job, at least on a part-time basis, next week.

Lt. Col. Elmer Kohmetscher said that Karthauser reported Wednesday a heart blockage problem he suffered in mid-October has sufficiently improved "so that he'll be able to return to work for half days next week, and full days the week after that."

Kohmetscher, who has been in charge of the patrol during Karthauser's absence, said the colonel entered St. Elizabeth Health Center Oct. 18 when he became ill following a police officers' association meeting in Columbus.

Kohmetscher said Karthauser reported that doctors told him the heart blockage might have been connected to a "silent heart attack" that Karthauser could have suffered as much as three years ago.

Suit against Winkle dismissed by judge

A federal lawsuit against outgoing Gage-Jefferson County Judge Dennis Winkle and the Gage Implement Co. of Beatrice has been dismissed by U.S. District Judge Warren Urbom for lack of jurisdiction.

Winkle, who was rejected by voters in the Nov. 2 general election, and the implement firm had been sued by Gage County farmer LaVern Meints, who claimed he was denied his constitutional rights of due process and equal treatment under the law.

The action stemmed from a default judgment of $1,200 that Winkle granted the implement company. Meints claimed in his federal court action that no proper notice of the default request was given to him before its approval by Winkle.

In his dismissal order, Urbom suggested that if any remedy is available to Meints it lies in the state, rather than the federal judicial system.

Shooting death investigated

Stanton — Investigation continued Thursday into the shooting death Wednesday of Jeffrey Kriesch, 8, at the farm home of his mother, Shirley Kriesch, northwest of Leigh, according to Stanton County Atty. Charles Caskey.

The county attorney said he believes the shooting was accidental. An autopsy was performed, but results were still unavailable, Caskey said.

Leaders knock farm price level

Farm Editor

Concern about the low level of farm income dominated a news conference Thursday by Tony Dechant, national president of the Farmers Union, and Dave Stroud, head of the National Livestock and Meat Board.

The news conference was held in conjunction with the three-day convention of the Nebraska Farmers Union in Lincoln.

"Farm income is at a level that compares to the depth of the depression in 1933. It is at 66% of parity when compared to non-farm income," Dechant said.

Stroud echoed Dechant's concern. "We aren't talking about prices being in the doldrums. Livestock producers are economically belly up. These are very tough times on the farm," Stroud said.

Dechant, in an address at the annual Farmers Union banquet, said that if farmers in Nebraska had full parity prices then the state would have had a $1 billion increase in income.

"Wheat prices are at only 51% of parity, corn and grain sorghum at 62% and 61% respectively. Minnesota and Wisconsin are losing dairy farmers by the thousands," he said.

Dechant expressed concern about farmers' credit sources. "If it wasn't for increased land values because we are taking huge chunks of land out of production for houses, roads and airports every year, farmers couldn't borrow money," he said.

"Farmers' ability to borrow is better than their ability to repay the loans," he said.

"There isn't a single farm product that is close to the cost of production. If it wasn't for a shortage of cotton, the average parity of income figure would be worse than the 66% figure," he said.

Dechant defended the parity of income figure. "It is based on the 1910-1914 period when farm and city income were the same, but all the data that goes into making up the ratio has been updated. They have allowed for the switch from horses to tractors, costs of inputs and changes of income," he said.

Dechant called for President-elect Carter to raise price support loans without waiting for Congress to act. "Existing authority on the books will permit price support loans to be raised as high as 100% of parity on wheat and 90% on corn, feed grains, soybeans, and dairy products," he said.

Loan levels should be increased "at least to the cost of production," he said.

Dechant declined to speculate on who the new secretary of agriculture would be. "I have had some names passed by me for my comments. I think it should be someone with a farm background who really understands the farmers' problems," he said.

The delegates to the convention have been working on a record number of resolutions that were prepared for them by a new group of committees set up by state Farmers Union President Louis Wiebe of Beatrice.

The convention routinely approved them with one notable exception when a predator control measure surfaced. The delegates rejected a resolution calling for bounty to be paid on predators that had passed through the resolutions committee.

Resolutions approved during the first day of the convention included:

- Support for local control of land-use planning
- Support for efforts to recharge underground water
- Individual ownership of underground water, for runoff controls and reasonable standards for regulating water under local control
- Restoring taxes on intangible property
- Urge that taxes not be collected under the new appraisal of land until all counties have completed the appraisal
- Opposed compulsory school reorganization
- Opposed gun control of any kind
- Opposed public radio
- Asked the highway department to stop coating roads in winter to reduce damage to glass on cars from flying gravel

Teacher Green is back on Scottsbluff council

Gering, (AP) — District Court Judge Ted Feidler issued a temporary injunction Wednesday placing Roger Green back on the Scottsbluff City Council pending a decision in his suit.

Green has been on and off the council since the body became aware in April 1976 of a 1917 state law prohibiting public employees from council membership in cities with the council-manager form of government.

Green is a faculty member at Nebraska Western College. The judge issued the temporary injunction following a hearing. He also acted in the case of Marjorie Mandujano, Scottsbluff Junior High guidance counselor who was elected to the city council last month.

New teacher training stressed in economics

The State Board of Education will study a report on college teacher preparation in social science and economics during their regular meeting Friday.

Economics education has been stressed by several groups of businessmen across the state who are concerned that high school graduates don't have enough basic knowledge to cope with modern economics in society.

A report to the board several months ago urged stricter requirements for teachers, with an emphasis placed on economics education on the college level.

The board will also review criteria suggested for the creation of vocational high school programs on a multi-district level (involving more than one school): programs for gifted and talented students, and equal educational opportunity and cultural diversity in the schools.

Friday's meetings will be held in the Statehouse because new quarters for the Education Department, in the State Office Building at 301 Centennial Mall South, haven't been completed.

Band trip tally hits $5,060

The Nebraska Foundation Thursday had $5,060 of the $40,000 needed to send the Cornhusker Marching Band to the Astro-Bleebom Bowl on Dec. 31.

Deadlines for contributions are Dec. 15. Contributions to the drive may be sent to the Band Fund at the University of Nebraska Foundation.

Schuetz may seek post

Associated Press
The man who Anne Batchelder narrowly defeated to become Republican state chairman says he may seek the post again in 1977.

E. L. Jack Schuetz of Lincoln lost to Mrs. Batchelder by three votes, 48-45, last year. Mrs. Batchelder has said she will seek another two-year term at the party helm.

Schuetz said he has received calls urging him to run and said that if solid support develops, he'll do it.

Don Steen of Morrill, party vice chairman, says he has been getting pressure from 3rd District Republicans to seek the chairmanship, but has been resisting it.

Steen says developments in his business might make it difficult for him to increase party activity.

Steen says there is resentment among 3rd District Republicans that Mrs. Batchelder and National Committeeman William Morrow, both of Omaha, are from the 2nd District, and that National Committeewoman Patricia Lahr Smith of Lincoln is from the 1st District.

"But the Republican Party certainly isn't dead," Steen said. "Either Anne or Jack would do a real good job. The party won't lack for leadership."

The state central committee, with 117 voting members, will convene Jan. 29 in Hastings to pick a chairman and elect other state officers.

In the past 18 years Schuetz has served twice as state GOP executive secretary, been a member of the congressional staff of former Rep. Ralph Beermann of Dakota City, and since 1967, been the Nebraska representative for Sen. Roman Hruska.

Hruska is retiring this month and Schuetz said he will leave government service at the same time.

Schuetz said that if he does decide to run for the chairmanship, and if elected, he would eliminate the position of paid executive director. "I'll fill that job myself," he said.

Lloyd Herbener is the party's current executive director.

Volunteers field prayer requests

North Platte (UPI) — Nearly 200 volunteers have helped the First United Methodist Church of North Platte deal with prayer requests coming from all over the nation, but the church wants to get the word out that other churches and prayer groups in their communities would be just as effective.

The requests began coming after a nationally circulated tabloid newspaper, The National Enquirer, published a feature earlier this month on the prayer groups operating in North Platte and listed the telephone number of a North Platte woman for persons wanting to call to have their needs brought to the attention of the prayer groups.

When she was inundated with calls, the Methodist Church took over the job of acting as a clearinghouse for the requests.

Volunteers to help with the mechanics of handling the requests and with prayers in response to the requests have come from many North Platte denominations.

The church has kept a telephone manned from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. and additional requests are taken on a recorder. From three to five persons have been busy each day reading mail requests and transcribing them to cards which are placed in the church's prayer chapel. Christians from any denomination use the chapel and pray for the persons and their needs as listed on the cards.

The church has accepted the responsibility of channeling the requests into a prayer response, but feels the newspaper article was sensational and misleading by implying North Platte has a special avenue of prayer not available elsewhere, according to the Rev. M. Wendell Davis, senior minister of the church.

In a release Thursday, he said the newspaper story "has shown First United Methodist Church the crying need of our generation. The prayer groups in our church and our city have been challenged to work together in response to the needs of these people.

"It is our belief the power that is sought is available to any person or group in our world," the Rev. Mr. Davis said. "At this Christmas season, we urge Christians in their local communities to reach out to the hurting with a Christ-like love."

"We also believe that to further exploit the hurts, pains and desperate cries of humanity is wrong. Articles that guess at the volume of letters and calls or which release specific requests found in them would be an exploitation of the people."

"This would be a violation of the trust placed in us," he said. "It is a further violation of the greatest of all moral codes: 'So whatever you wish that men would do to you, do so to them, for this is the law and the prophets.' Matthew 7:12."

Second suspect located in murder

Sidney (AP) — A second suspect in the murder of a construction worker last month near here has been located in a Los Angeles jail, authorities said Thursday.

A Nebraska State Patrol investigator said Jerry Simpson, 20, had been jailed on a charge involving a motor vehicle. He said an arrest warrant charging him with first degree murder in the death of Frederick J. Skiba was on its way to California.

Skiba's body was found with four bullet wounds along Interstate 80 near here Nov. 20.

Simpson's sister, Jacqueline Simpson Brick, 23, was arrested in Los Angeles earlier this week after investigators from Nebraska traced her there. A spokesman for the State Patrol said Mrs. Brick, who is charged with first degree murder, was arrested at a Los Angeles police station after authorities got a friend of hers to talk her into going to the station. He said she evidently thought she was wanted for questioning involving child support.

Donald Grieb of the patrol said investigators theorize that the pair and Mrs. Brick's 3-year-old child were hitchhiking from Ohio to California when they were picked up by Skiba. Skiba had just finished construction work in Omaha and was on his way to another job in Reno, Nev., authorities said.

Police began their investigation of Simpson and the Brick woman after workers at the Sidney bus depot recalled they purchased a ticket for Los Angeles the night before Skiba's car was found abandoned near Kimball.

A spokesman for the Nebraska State Patrol said Mrs. Brick's has refused to waive extradition and that proceedings have begun.

Ice skating areas opened

The Lincoln Parks and Recreation Department has opened three areas for ice skating.

Locations now open are: Holmes Lake, now listed in good condition; Henry Park, now in poor condition and area north of the stadium in Seacrest Field, now in poor condition.

Hours at the skating areas are from sunrise until midnight.

Bernstein named Brandeis trustee

Waltham, Mass. (UPI) — Leonard Bernstein, conductor of the New York Philharmonic since 1969, has been named a trustee of Brandeis University. Bernstein helped develop Brandeis' school of creative arts and was a faculty member.

Two assure Zorinsky of seat

Associated Press

Sen. elect Edward Zorinsky said that two front-runners for the position of Senate majority leader have told him he will have a seat on the Agriculture Committee.

Zorinsky was in Lincoln to attend a meeting of Lancaster County women Democrats.

Zorinsky said both Sens. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota and Robert Byrd of West Virginia told him he would be made a member of the Agriculture Committee "even if we have to make another position on that committee."

Exon to wait on replacement

A replacement for State Sen. Harold Simpson of Lincoln probably won't be named before the Legislative Council meets on Monday.

Aides to Gov. J. J. Exon said the governor is not expected to select Simpson's replacement for at least a week. Simpson has formally told Exon he would resign Dec. 31. He will be sworn in Jan. 6 as a member of the Public Service Commission.

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln, chairman of the council's executive board, said he requested the governor to make the appointment before the Monday and Tuesday council meeting.

Waltham, Mass. (UPI) — Leonard Bernstein, conductor of the New York Philharmonic since 1969, has been named a trustee of Brandeis University. Bernstein helped develop Brandeis' school of creative arts and was a faculty member.

TAFY board planning opening of 'Cinderella'

Theater Arts for Youth board members firmed up plans for sponsoring the Dec. 19 opening night performance of "Cinderella" at the Lincoln Community Playhouse at a board meeting Thursday.

TAFY board president David Meisenholder said the $300 TAFY paid for the performance will be a contribution to the Children's Theater Building fund.

Meisenholder said he is pleased with the capacity crowd of 650 who attended Saturday's first hotdog theater presentation of the season.

Ventriloquist and juggler Dave Castle will again give hotdog theater shows Saturday at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. in the Brandeis fifth floor auditorium.

A thousand dollars from the hotdog theater proceeds will help fund a free children's performance of the Pennsylvania Ballet Feb. 28 at Kimball Hall.

Children who want to go to that performance may write to Channels 10/11 KUON TV/KGIN TV for free tickets. Self-addressed stamped envelopes should accompany orders. Tickets will be sent the first week of February in order of requests.

Here is a children's little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If it is a number of letters is 5 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper right-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Osborne gets warm feeling

By Randy York
Staff Sports Writer

Omaha — They called it a roast, but it was more like chicken wire than barbed wire Thursday when Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne received the "Great Guy Award" from the City of Hope. (With regard to late season Nebraska losses to Iowa State and Oklahoma), but 11 "roasters" kept the heat on Osborne to a simmer.

Those who tried to push the needle harder generally missed their mark with the 400 who paid $20 a plate to watch the benefit affair at the Omaha Hilton.

All of which prompted Nebraska Lt. Governor Gerald Whelan, the final roaster, to observe "this has been the most scintillating thing I've sat through since Dick Marvel read through the budget last year."

Lincoln sportscaster Mark Ahmann emceed the program. Roasters were Omaha sportscasters Bob Bruce, Jim Ketter, Joe Patrick and Wayne Dzubak; Omaha writers Bill Hord and Howard Silber; Lincoln writer Virgil Parker;

The tone of Osborne's roast was set when a mock church choir sang these lyrics to the tune of "Onward Christian Soldier":

Onward Christian jock straps
To the Bluebonnet Bowl,
Though we're rated lower
We're No. 1 in soul.

Though we had to settle for mediocrity
We're first in faith
And first in hope
And first in charity.

Onward Christian jock straps
Down the field of play.

Winning points with Jesus
Praying all the way.

When the Big Red's trailing
And it's fourth and 10,
And the fans are waiting
Bring back Bob again.

That's when we must piously trust in God the most Cause our backfield is Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

Onward Christian jock straps
Fumbling the ball,
Without Bob Devaney, we can't win them all.

Hear the fans all booing
Let them all eat cake,
Even God almighty makes a few mistakes.

In a string of Saturdays
We may lose a few,
Still you know on Sunday morning, we'll be in the pew.

Onward Christian jock straps
Though we're fair, and square,
Without Bob Devaney

Advice to NU: Expect tough Illinois game

Lonnie Porter has simple advice for Nebraska's basketball team: Expect a tough game Saturday at Illinois.

"This is a very well-coached team. They won't take wild shots. They have a deliberate offense as well as a sound defense," said Porter, who scouted Illinois in a 76-75 loss to Missouri at Columbia, Mo., in the Show Me Classic.

Nebraska faces Illinois at 3:05 p.m. Saturday at Assembly Hall in Champaign, Ill., in NU's third meeting this season with a Big Ten foe.

Coach Joe Cipriano's Huskers lost the first two Big Ten matches — 71-57 to Iowa and 66-58 to Minnesota.

Porter, however, warns that Illinois won't be any easier.

"They always have five players who can shoot the basketball. Against Missouri, they shot 60 per cent and still lost," said Porter. "They're very strong defensively and patient with their offense."

"Their coach (Lou Henson) has done a great job," noted the NU assistant basketball coach. "Illinois will be awfully tough for us."

Porter's capsule descriptions of the Illinois standouts:

— Rob Judson, a 6-2 freshman guard who came off the bench against MU to hit eight of 12 field goals in the second half and finished with 16 points. "He singlehandedly almost won the game for Illinois."

— Rich Adams, a 6-9 junior center who scored 25 points against Nebraska last year in a 60-58 Illinois win at the NU Coliseum. "He's an excellent player who can play the post down low or shoot from the floor."

— Levi Cobb, a 6-6 freshman forward who was one of the country's most sought-after prepsters from Morgan Park, Ill. "He's a super leaper. For a freshman he's so mature. He's a very sound player, not fancy."

— Audie Matthews, a 6-5 junior guard. "All their big people are similar in that they shoot well from 17 feet on in. Judson is the only long-range shooter."

"Illinois will be tougher than last year. They have more experience and Levi Cobb, despite just a freshman, is helping them a lot," Porter continued. "It takes a couple of years to learn a new coach's system (this is Henson's second year at Champaign)."

Illinois owns a 3-1 record with victories over St. Louis (68-65) and later 54-46 in the Show Me Classic) and San Jose State (64-70).

Henson credits much of his team's success to Cobb.

"Levi Cobb is really doing a job for us and even though he is only a freshman, he's been playing like a veteran. We're happy with the way we played in the Show Me Classic because we held our opponents to a low shooting percentage and this means our defense is improving," he said.

The Huskers, meanwhile, gained some experience in the Wednesday night loss to Minnesota, expected to be a prime contender for Big Ten laurels this season.

They held the Gophers to a 51-all tie with less than five minutes to play before all-American Mike Thompson brought the northerners a 63-53 lead three minutes later.

Cipriano is stressing the importance of the contest.

"We must control Rich Adams because he was the main reason for Illinois beating us last year. This will be our fifth road game of the year and if we can be a road team now it will really help us when we travel in the Big Eight," Cipriano said.

The Huskers host Northwest Missouri Monday at 7:35 p.m. in the NU Sports Center.

Burroughs to Braves; Blue deal axed

Los Angeles (UPI) — The long anticipated trade of Texas Rangers' slugger Jeff Burroughs was finally completed at the winter baseball meetings Thursday, but the Boston Red Sox cooled the prospects of yet another blockbuster deal by rejecting Oakland A's southpaw Vida Blue for $2 million.

Burroughs, the 1974 American League most valuable player, was swapped by the Rangers to the Atlanta Braves for five players—pitchers Carl Morton, Adrian Devine and Roger Moret and outfielders Ken Henderson and Dave May plus $250,000 in cash.

The trade of the 25-year-old slugging outfielder concluded nearly a week of feverish negotiations by the Rangers, who had also talked with the Chicago White Sox about Burroughs.

Burroughs, who hit a disappointing .237 with 18 homers and 86 runs batted in last season, will join newly-acquired free agent Gary Matthews in the Braves' outfield while the Rangers, now overstocked with pitchers, viewed the deal as a prelude to future trades.

"I talked with Jeff this morning," said Atlanta owner Ted Turner, "and he was pretty shook up. But once he gets over the initial shock I think he'll be happy with us. I would have liked to have talked to him before the trade, but as you know, that would be tampering."

The flamboyant Turner previously was fined $10,000 by baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn for the manner in which he negotiated the Matthews' signing. Earlier this week Kuhn said he was investigating the Matthews' matter again because of charges brought against Turner by Matthews' old team, the San Francisco Giants.

Burroughs, who hit .301 with 25 homers and 118 rbi in winning the AL MVP award in 1974, was reportedly "psyched out" by the Rangers' Arlington Stadium.

Atlanta Stadium, however, has long had a reputation of being a haven for power-hitters.

"There's no question it should be a great psychological boost to Jeff, playing in Atlanta," said Rangers' manager Frank Lucchesi.

"Getting Martin, Devine and Moret most certainly gives us a surplus of pitching," Lucchesi added.

Thunderbolts topple Crete

The Lincoln Pius X girls basketball team handed Crete its first loss of the year defeating the Cardinals 58-56 Thursday night at the Thunderbolt's gym.

Senior Mary Mulligan, playing most of the second half with four fouls, led the Pius offense with 13 points.

Pius coach Mike Schmidt received what he termed an all-around performance from 6-0 freshman center Collene Weygint. Weygint, who scored 12 points, played both center and guard during the fourth quarter after the Bolts' two top scorers, Ann Hain and Nancy Lehr fouled out.

McAdoo to Knicks

New York — The New York Knicks acquired high-scoring center-forward Bob McAdoo and reserve center Tom McMillen from the Buffalo Braves Thursday for center John Gianelli and a reported $3 million.

The deal for the 6-foot-10 McAdoo, the National Basketball Association's scoring leader the last three seasons, climaxed several days of on-again, off-again announcements that had the four-year veteran from North Carolina heading to the Knicks, then going to the Seattle SuperSonics, then staying with the Braves.

McAdoo, the Braves' No. 1 choice in the 1972 draft, is in the final year of a five-year contract paying him $400,000 this season—$200,000 in cash and $200,000 in deferred payments.

In 30 games this year, the 25-year-old McAdoo has averaged 23.7 points and 13.2 rebounds. In his four previous seasons he had a 26.5 scoring average including an 18.0 mark his first year.

McMillen, 23, a 6-11 second-year pro out of Maryland, is averaging 5.1 points and 3.5 rebounds this year.

Wichita, Kan. (AP) — A college graduate posed for a year under an assumed name as a student at Wichita East High School and won two gymnastics championships in a city-wide prep meet last weekend, it was disclosed Thursday.

The East High gymnast who competed as Scott Johnson was in fact Patrick Lajko, an Iowa State University graduate and a four-year letterman at the school, the Wichita Beacon reported.

East High Principal Claradine Johnson said Thursday the deception began about a year ago when Lajko enrolled at East posing as a high school dropout from Iowa.

An East High faculty member was quoted by the newspaper as saying it is believed a number of East students were involved in the deception, including a student aide who participated in falsifying a transcript and student records for the impostor.

Nelson Hartman, director of the Kansas State High School Activities Association, said his office was notified of the falsification Wednesday but declined further comment.

When school officials questioned Lajko Wednesday, Dr. Johnson said, he admitted his true identity and his enrollment as Scott Johnson was immediately withdrawn.

Lajko, of Des Moines, was not immediately available for comment.

Harry Burrell, sports information director at Iowa State, said Lajko graduated from the Ames school in 1974 and was a member of the gymnastics team for four years.

In the Wichita City League gymnastics meet Saturday, in which eight city high schools competed, Lajko won two individual championships, finished fourth in two events and was second in over-all competition.

Lajko also had been on the East High swimming team.

The East gymnastic team must forfeit five dual meets, four invitational tournaments and the team trophy for the East invitational meet, said Bob Lytle, East assistant principal.

A school board spokesman said Lajko was a member of the school's yearbook staff and also took some photography for the school board.

Arnie Lowrey, a photojournalism teacher, described him as bright and outgoing but said "He's playing games at this point and he needs to have help. I hope he will find his ethics again and my hope is that he will be able to be a service to mankind again."

Second try lifts Mulvaney

By Chuck Sinclair
Prep Sports Writer

Most players would have hung up their competitive sneakers after going through what Bob Mulvaney did last year.

An all-city tennis player for East, the 6-4 Mulvaney lasted just three days of basketball practice before getting cut.

But taking the attitude of playing basketball for fun, Mulvaney turned his efforts towards intramurals and church league, apparently destined never to play high school ball.

That lasted only until the intramural supervisors talked East coaches Paul Forch and Ed McPherrin into watching some of the after-school action before the varsity practice.

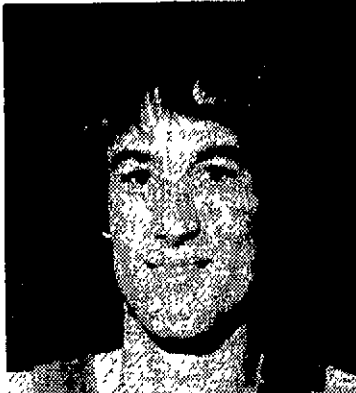

There was only four weeks left in the season, but the coaches liked what they saw and invited Mulvaney and Mark Carlson back to finish the year on reserves.

The move is looking better all the time to Forch, especially after Mulvaney's 23 points and 17 rebounds led East to a 57-47 season-opening upset over Bellevue last Saturday.

Now, Mulvaney must gear for another challenge from a Metro school when Omaha Central visits East Saturday night in the Spartans first home game.

"It was quite an experience for me," Mulvaney says of his effort against Bellevue, conqueror of seventh-rated Omaha Burke the night before. "It didn't really hit me until the manager came up in the bus and said the totals."

"I had no idea that I was even the leading scorer," he adds. "The important thing is not to let anything go to your head. As a team, we've got a lot of potential, even though we don't have any starters back from last year."

It's unlikely Mulvaney will let one game go to his head after facing the initial reality of not being good enough to make the team a year ago.

"I was hurting when practice started last year and missed the first one because of my back," Mulvaney says. "Then after two more I was cut."

"It was kind of awkward and hard to adjust when the coaches asked me back out," Mulvaney says. "But coach McPherrin made me feel pretty good about it, and the rest of the players were great."

Mulvaney approached this year's tryouts with much more confidence.

"I worked pretty hard before practice and during the summer," he says. "I was confident of myself, especially since we didn't have much height."

vousness in his first start.

"Coach Forch had told us that there was no pressure on anybody since we were picked to lose the game," he says. "But I was still pretty nervous until everything got going, then I loosened up."

Mulvaney found out how physical things could get when he drew the assignment of guarding Bellevue's center.

"What a monster," Mulvaney recalls. "He was 6-2 and about 240 or 250 pounds. He really wasn't very mobile, but he was physical. The biggest thing was screening them off the boards. That's something we're really going to have to do well against Central."

Central blew out season opening foe Council Bluffs AL, 98-59.

While Mulvaney and East look forward to Saturday night's contest, Lincoln Northeast has to prepare a bit earlier for its encounter with Kearney Friday night at Johnson Gym.

The Rockets are going for win No. 501 and 382 in the coaching career of Ed Johnson.

The only other prep basketball action involving Lincoln schools Friday night are girls games as East hosts Hastings and Lincoln High travels to Omaha Westside.

Saturday night, the rest of the boys teams are in action as Pius X hosts Fairbury, Lincoln High travels to McCook and Southeast to Fremont.

Hunters scarce

Conservation officers for the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission report little outdoor activity across the state. Most hunters have hung up their guns in favor of other pursuits and a few fishermen are beginning to venture out on some lakes across the state.

Hunters should be reminded that Sunday marks the end of the 1976 pheasant season in Nebraska. The Low Plains duck season in the eastern half of the state also closes at sundown on Sunday.

Clark Lake is holding about 2,000 ducks and an occasional mallard is being taken.

SOUTHWEST — Hunting success is good on waterfowl at Harlan County Reservoir, according to Roger Guenther, the officer from Alma. Hunters were taking mallards, divers, and some Canada geese. Enders Reservoir was holding 40,000 ducks and 160 geese, while Swanston Reservoir was holding 1,500 ducks and 350 geese. Hunting success was poor at both places, but hunters were taking a few geese. In Buffalo and Kearney counties, hunters were having fair success on quail along the Platte River. The river was reported to be mostly frozen over in the area and duck hunting was slow, but a few geese were being taken.

PANHANDLE — Ice anglers were taking perch to 34-pound on worms at Lake Ogallala. Anglers were taking 12" to 14" rainbow at the Keystone Diversion Dam at the lower end of the lake. Best baits were worms and marshmallows. Fair to good success was to be had for waterfowl on Lake Ogallala and the west end of Lake McConaughy, and hunters were having good success at Clear Creek public hunting area on Canada geese.

SOUTHEAST — Pheasant hunting pressure was reported to be light in most areas. Hunters in Fillmore County were having good success during the afternoon hours. Ice fishing is just getting under way along the Salt Valley lake system. Anglers were having some success on bluegill and an occasional bass on Branch Oak Lake. At Yankee Hill Lake, anglers were taking a few crappie and an occasional bass.

Concordia coach quits

Seevers' resignation follows a disappointing 1-9 season. He began his Concordia coaching career in 1970 with an 8-1 season and an NIAC championship. His overall seven-year record at Concordia is 31-32-3.

Seevers said that he feels the decision "is in the best interest of Concordia's football program."

W. Th. Janzow, president of Concordia, expressed appreciation for Seevers' seven years as Concordia's football coach. He said Seevers is a man of the highest standards and integrity.

NU spikers 1-2 in meet

Austin, Tex. — The Nebraska women's volleyball team lost a close match to Illinois State University Thursday night to put its record at 1-2 in the AIAW National Volleyball Tournament.

Illinois State defeated Nebraska 12-15, 15-13, 15-4.

The Huskers began tournament play by defeating Florida International University 15-11, 8-15, 15-11.

Holtz reverses field

Hempstead, N.Y. (AP) — Lou Holtz pulled a reverse Thursday, quitting as head coach of the New York Jets one day after saying he'd stick around, and admitted he'd like to return to the college ranks at Arkansas.

"Lou Holtz is not made for professional football," the 39-year-old Holtz said, resigning after fulfilling just one season of the five-year contract he signed last Feb. 10 for an estimated $100,000 a year. "I can't give professional football my heart. God did not put Lou Holtz on this earth for that."

Mike Holovak will coach the Jets Sunday against Cincinnati. A loss will leave the team at 3-11, matching last year's record—the worst in the club's history. Holovak was the director of scouting for two years

Meanwhile, Holtz is eyeing the head coaching job at Arkansas, vacated by Frank Broyles, devoting his full time to the post of athletic director.

"If Arkansas would be interested in talking to me, I would be interested in talking to them," Holtz said.

Apparently Arkansas is interested. In Fayetteville, Ark., Dr. Charles Bishop, the university's president, said he knew Holtz wanted to return to college coaching and that Broyles had contacted Holtz to see if he might be interested.

Bishop said he would rely heavily on Broyles' judgment in filling the post and called Holtz the "kind of man we would like to hire."

Harris aids Wesleyan in 'tall man' position

By Ken Hambleton
State College Writer

For the past two years Nebraska Wesleyan's basketball team has had a problem with height after 6-9 center Blake Butler either had to be rested, or got into foul trouble. But SE-Fairbury Junior College transfer Steve Harris may be the answer coach Irv Peterson has been looking for this season.

No, Harris is not seven-foot tall, rather 6-11. But the Lincoln High graduate plays as well as any "tall man" on the court.

Last week against a tall William Penn team, Harris was responsible for blocking three shots and grabbing seven rebounds. And along with Butler, transfer Paul Fox and sophomore forward Bob Otto, the Plainsmen don't have to cringe under the basket anymore.

"Harris can jump 10-7 with a half-step start, which means he's getting four-and-one-half feet off the ground," said Peterson. "And his asset is that when he gets a hand on the ball, he controls it. I don't think he's lost a rebound all year."

The Plainsmen, coming off a loss to Mount Marty Monday, will host Kansas Wesleyan Friday night at 7:30 p.m. in the Ira Taylor Gym, and then entertain Sterling College Saturday night at the same time.

NWU took an earlier decision from the Coyotes in the Missouri-KC basketball tourney with a 104-97 win. But coach Peterson notes this time the KWU team will be tougher to beat.

"We won down there with a great team effort," said Peterson. "But we'll have to be better prepared for them than we were for Mt. Marty last Monday."

KWU coach Steve Young will rely on 6-5 forward Tim Teeter, who averages 26 points and 17 rebounds per game. "I think we'll either be sagging off or playing a very loose man-to-man defense in order to slow him down," NWU coach Peterson said of Teeter. In the first meeting between the two teams Teeter scored 37 points.

"If that first game is any indication of how this one will be, it should be a barn-burner," said KWU's Young.

In other top games this weekend Mt. Marty faces Concordia Friday at Seward and SE-Fairbury travels to Scottsbluff to face Nebraska Western in a crucial Nebraska Community College Conference game.

Saturday Kearney, which narrowly defeated a much improved Peru State team this week, travels to Crete to face Doane in an important game counting towards the NAIA District 11 representative. Wayne meets Hastings, also a game which will help decide the NAIA representative to the Nationals in Kansas City in March.

Cowens surprises collegian foes

Madison, Fla. (AP) — Florida State's junior varsity basketball team had exams the next day, so a junior college opponent allowed the Seminoles to use some ringers in a practice game.

But Dick Danford, North Florida Junior College coach, got more than he bargained for.

Lining up at center for the Florida State jayvees was Dave Cowens, the pro basketball All-Star who shocked the sports world last month by taking an unpaid leave of absence from the Boston Celtics.

"Yeah, they slipped one in on us," chuckled Danford.

Cowens' teammates in the Monday night game were Reggie Royals, Ron King, Larry Wisfi and Randy Cable—all former Florida State starters.

They won 82-62, but Danford said his players didn't mind.

"I had one kid that wanted Dave to hit him in the eye so he could go home and tell all his friends that Cowens gave him a black eye," he said.

Film crew discovers dummy not really very funny

Los Angeles (AP) — Police are looking for the former owners of a wax museum after the discovery that what was thought to be a wax dummy hanging from a noose turned out to be a painted mummified corpse.

The corpse was discovered in an amusement park's fun house during the filming of the television show, "The Six Million Dollar Man." Long Beach Police turned the mummy over to the Los Angeles County Coroner on Thursday to determine how old it is and where it came from.

It had been hanging by a noose from a makeshift gallows in the Nu-Pike

Before that it had been displayed in a casket at a now-defunct wax museum as the "thousand-year-old man."

The discovery that it was a human corpse came Wednesday during the filming of a scene in the fun house for the television series.

A technician moved the body and an arm fell off. He was about to glue it back on when he noticed that a bone was sticking out.

1st convention for Eagleton was Republican

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — Sen. Thomas Eagleton, briefly the Democrats' vice presidential candidate in 1972, says he almost was a Republican.

Speaking Wednesday at Kansas State University in honor of former Gov. Alf Landon, Eagleton said his father, Mark Eagleton, had been a Republican in St. Louis. Eagleton said his first political memories were of his father working for Landon's campaign.

"I still have one of those buttons, one of those felt snowflakes with the Landon button in the middle," Eagleton said.

He said the first national convention he attended was the GOP convention of 1940. His father was a delegate, he said.

Postmaster fears day of Jan. 20

Minneapolis (UPI) — Ray Halvorson is 67 and he's been the postmaster at the tiny village of Ceylon, Minn., for 20 years.

But he's sure he's never seen a day like the one looming on Jan. 20, 1977.

The U.S. Postal Service has decreed that inauguration day cancellations will be available on that day in Washington, Jimmy Carter's hometown of Plains, Ga., and Walter F. Mondale's birthplace of Ceylon, Minn. — population 487.

"Gollie," said Halvorson. "That's way out of my capabilities. I couldn't possibly handle a mountain of mail."

"I've only got one clerk and he's only come on Saturday and besides he just quit on me after 42 years on the job. I'm shaking in my boots."

Halvorson handles an average of 500 pieces of mail a day for 1,500 families in Ceylon and the surrounding rural areas — "Of course it's a lot heavier now that the Christmas season is here."

Actually, Halvorson will only have to hand stamp letters brought to him in person. The Postal Service has decreed a limit of 100 letters per person although there is no limit on letters sent by mail.

The mailed pieces will be "trapped" and cancelled with the Ceylon deadline at the sectional postal center at Windom, some 40 miles to the northwest — a bit of deception but the only practical way it can be handled.

"It's going to be a new experience for all of us," said George Freking, 56, the Windom sectional manager. "We've never gone through anything like this before, but I think we can handle it."
